German People Are Aroused over Hess's Flight

Disclosure of Landing In Scotland Overshadows Even Interest in War

Adolf Hitler and High Ranking Nazis Confer Soon after German Public Is Told of Dramatic Plane Trip by the No. 3 Leader of Reich; Reports that Wife and Son Also Flew Are Denied

(By The Associated Press)
BERLIN, May 13.—Adolf Hitler called all high Nazi figures and government leaders to a conference late today soon after the disclosure of Rudolf Hess's flight to Britain, which aroused the German people as they had rarely been aroused in this war.

The assembly party leaders, said the Nazi news service, "gave the Fuehrer—who spoke to the gathering—an impressive demonstration of a determined will for victory." The official announcement said nothing of the Hess incident in connection with the conference.

Hess himself, who had suddenly abandoned the third place in party power for the status of a war prisoner in England, was officially labeled by his Nazi party associates as a deluded seeker of peace. They put him down as sick, delirious and muddled idealist ridden with "hallucinations" traceable to World War injuries, and the party declared in a formal statement:

"Will Not Interfere With War."
This will not interfere with the continuation of the war against England (which was) forced upon the German people."

Hess, who had stood in the high leadership behind only Hitler himself and Reichsmarschal Hermann Goering, was described as a "once-brilliant man reduced by poor health to the status of a superstitious nostrum-seeker and patronizer of 'various aids,' mesmerizers, astrologers and so forth."

Any notion that he had fled in fear was ridiculed.
"Intimations abroad that there is to be some shakeup or purge are idiotic," a spokesman declared. "There was no persecution complex involved in Hess's conduct and the Gestapo's isn't on the scent of anything."

Not until late today did the Germans learn from the newspapers and radio that the deputy Fuehrer had landed in Scotland from a flight which started last Saturday in Augsburg, Germany, but his "fateful delusion" overshadowed even interest in the war.

Wife and Son in Germany
Reports that his wife and small son also had left the country were strongly denied; it was said they were wholly free and had the sympathy of all party members. Specifically denied was a report that Frau Hess had gone to Ankara, Turkey; it was added that she was at her home in Germany.

Australian Prime Minister

Not Suffice

NEW YORK, May 13 (P)—Australian Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies tonight urged America to a "single-minded effort in the production of materials of war and in the delivery of those materials to those places in which they can be effectively used."

"It may be that there are still many of you who believe that some decent fraction of your effort will suffice," he said in an address prepared for the NBC-Blue network. "I beg of you to understand that it will not. Whether you are neutral or belligerent—and that is for you and nobody else to decide—our cause, which is your cause, can not be made victorious by half measures."

He declared, however, that the United States aid need not include

Joseph Rosier Is Seated by Senate As Successor to Matthew Neely

Action Comes after Solons
Vote 40 to 38 against Sealing Clarence Martin, Holt's Choice

By HAMILTON FARON
WASHINGTON, May 13 (P)—The Senate voted today to seat Joseph Rosier, former president of the National Education Association, as Democratic Senator from West Virginia, succeeding M. M. Neely who resigned to become governor and who appointed him.

The action came after the Senate had voted forty to thirty-eight against seating Clarence Martin, who had been appointed by former Governor Homer A. Holt.

Rosier, president of the Fairmont (W.Va.) State Teachers College has declared he would not seek re-election if seated.

Neely and Rosier supporters in the Senate based their successful fight for his approval upon contentions that Neely simultaneously left the Senate and became governor, and therefore the Senate vacancy occurred in his term as governor.

Few Scattered Noes

Opponents, backing designation of Martin, former president of the American Bar Association, by Holt, argued that an interval elapsed between Neely's resignation and induction as governor. In that interval, they contended, Holt was empowered to fill the vacant Senate seat.

There were a few scattered "noes" as Vice President Wallace put the motion to seat Rosier. The motion carried on a voice vote.

Plans immediately were made for the president of Fairmont (W.Va.) State Teachers College to come to Washington and take his oath of office as junior Democratic Senator from West Virginia.

Rosier, affectionately known to many West Virginians as "Uncle Joe," presented his credentials to the Senate in January, but since has been an infrequent visitor.

His only statement to the committee was to the effect that he accepted the nomination from "my good friend" Neely because he and Neely had similar political philosophies and he felt that he could carry out Neely's work in the Senate. He also asserted that he did not seek the appointment and did not expect to seek reelection at the expiration of the two years remaining of Neely's Senate term.

Insistence by Chairman Connally (D-Tex.) of the Senator when he left his seat at midnight January 12 closed the debate.

"Neely does not own the senatorship; Holt does not own the senatorship; the senatorship belongs to the people of West Virginia," Connally declared.

"Neely had just come from an election and isn't it more logical and more feasible that a governor the people have just chosen" should fill the vacancy.

Martin Is Present
Connally's assertions that Holt had been repudiated in the same election brought a retort that Senator Chandler (D-Ky.), leader of Martin forces on the floor, that "Holt was not repudiated. He wasn't even eligible to stand for reelection," under state laws.

A moment later the roll call began on Chandler's motion that the Senate accept appointment of Martin. This was defeated by the forty to 38 vote.

(By The Associated Press)
The possibility arose yesterday (Tuesday) of a new shutdown in the Appalachian soft coal mines, only recently re-opened under a temporary wage agreement.

John L. Lewis, president of the CIO United Mine Workers, said in New York that unless a permanent agreement could be reached with Southern operators this week it might be "considered necessary" to call miners from their jobs in all of the Appalachian pits.

Asserting he was not impressed with the progress of the wage conference, Lewis said the union had "no desire to continue this uncertainty in the industry."

Lewis Threatens To Stop Soft Coal Production

Will Withdraw 330,000
Miners in Appalachian
Fields If Southern Op-

NEW YORK, May 13 (P)—John L. Lewis tonight threatened to stop again production of seventy per cent of the country's defense-critical soft coal unless Southern coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America (CIO) reach immediate agreement on a new wage contract.

Strongly implying that renewed negotiations with the Southern operators were collapsing for the third time in two months, the miners' chief said he would recommend that the union withdraw the 330,000 miners from the eight-state Appalachian fields—probably by May 21—unless a pact was agreed upon this week.

A similar stoppage began last April 1 when the old two-year Appalachian contract—based on national-wide contracts—expired, and result-

State Guard Will Be Composed of Ten Battalions

Cumberland Will Have
Two Companies of Fifty
Men Each

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 13 (P)—Governor O'Connor announced tonight the Maryland State guard would consist of ten battalions, eight from the Western shore and two from the Eastern Shore.

Approximately 2,000 officers and enlisted men will comprise the force, he said. Enlistments will be for one year or more, he added.

Brig. Gen. Dwight Hohr, recently appointed guard commander by O'Connor, said recruiting would start next week. Age limits probably will be from 21 to 50, he said, with recruiting centered at the ten state armories.

Guardsmen will wear khaki uniforms and serve without pay unless called into active duty. State headquarters will be opened Monday in the Baltimore Fifth Regiment Armory.

O'Connor said the regimental headquarters staff would consist of a commander, an executive officer, a plans and training officer, a supply officer, a medical officer and an adjutant.

The battalion headquarters staff will be similar.
Four battalions, including a medical unit, will be organized in Baltimore.

The Southern Maryland battalion will consist of companies to be organized in Annapolis, Hyattsville and Laurel.
The Western Maryland battalion will be composed of two companies from Cumberland and one each from Hagerstown and from Garrett county.

The battalion for counties adjacent to Washington will consist of companies organized in Silver Spring, Frederick and Howard county.

Pikesville, Towson, Bel Air and Westminster will furnish companies making up the battalion representation.

British Fleet Beats Off Nazi Air Attacks

Larry Allen Tells of Experiences on Battleship in Mediterranean

By LARRY ALLEN
ABOARD THE BATTLESHIP WARSPITE, FLAGSHIP OF THE BRITISH MEDITERRANEAN FLEET, May 13 (P)—Back in an Egyptian base after beating off one of the most determined torpedo and bombing attacks of the war and shelling the Axis base at Benghazi, ship crews of the British Mediterranean fleet loaded new ammunition today with determination to keep the Mediterranean open at all costs.

The entire battle fleet, at anchor in the calm harbor waters, presented a peaceful picture in sharp contrast to the fiery show I saw Saturday night (May 10) during a seventy-five minute battle with German planes somewhere between Libya and the Island of Crete.

The planes, attempting to cripple a large war convoy, swooped six times to the attack between 9:15 and 10:30 p. m., but none got near enough to launch torpedoes successfully.

The strong fleet escort saw to that by hurling up thousands of shells of various calibers, from six-inches to the little pompons, under the bright light of the moon.

Nazis Give Up
The Nazis finally gave up the raid after seeing their bombs and torpedoes splash harmlessly into the sea.

They returned after midnight, but a brief blast of gunfire was enough to send them soaring off again.

As the fleet was moving convays Eastward, a half-dozen Axis planes attacked on May 8, last Thursday, and lost two Italian and two German planes and a fifth unidentified type.

They tried it again on Friday, and the fleet air arm brought down another, a Junkers dive-bomber, while damaging several more.

On Saturday, as dusk closed in and the moon began to climb, we became aware that the Axis planes were shadowing us again.

Suddenly I saw a formation of at least twelve planes dive out of a nearby cloud toward the silhouettes of these battleships, cruisers, destroyers and merchantmen.
The Nazis got the surprise they had planned for the fleet, for as they headed toward the convoyed ships the night was turned bright as noonday by the instantaneous blast of many naval guns.

Forced out of position and unable to launch their torpedoes, the planes skimmed over the shimmering sea and headed back toward the line of battleships.

LONDON, May 13.—High Britons declared tonight that Rudolf Hess by his almost incredible flight from Adolf Hitler, had given Britain more military advantage "than a major victory on the battlefield."

Authoritative sources said moreover, that the desertion of Adolf Hitler's deputy fuehrer was concrete evidence that Hess "and others in the inner councils of the Nazis" had decided that Germany could not beat a Britain backed by full United States aid.

Members of Commons speculated even that Hess quarreled with other Nazis because he already knew that Hitler had abandoned his plan for invasion of England.

"Hess would not have come to Britain if he believed Hitler had a chance to stage a successful invasion of England in the near future," reliable informants said. "For he'd then be in the power of those with him he so elegantly has fallen out."

In parliamentary lobbies, there were suggestions that Hess might be persuaded to broadcast to Germany and the German-occupied countries, to give them a picture of what is going on in Hitler's inside councils.

The British short-wave radio already was spreading the news of his desertion far and wide. Today it quoted this Cairo comment: "The first rat to leave the ship."

Churchill Works on Case
The House of Commons, meeting in temporary quarters because of the destruction wrought to its chamber by Saturday night's Nazi raid, heard from Prime Minister Winston Churchill that he had worked on the case personally most of last night.

He deferred a detailed statement, but he remarked: "... This is one of those cases in which the imagination is somewhat baffled by the facts as they present themselves."

The house, in high humor, roared with laughter.
Churchill did not reply to one member's demand that he "bear in mind this gentleman's record of devotion to the vile genius of Europe."

Second Attempt To Lynch Florida Negro Successful

Body of Youth Arrested on Assault Charge Riddled by Bullets

QUINCY, Fla., May 13 (P)—A twenty-two-year-old negro arrested for attempted assault upon a twelve-year-old white girl, his body riddled by bullets from two lynching efforts of a masked band, was found dead shortly after daybreak today on a creek bridge north of here.

The lynching stirred a state investigation. Governor Spessard L. Holland called for a detailed report from Sheriff M. P. Luten and State Attorney Irvin C. Parker, who said they had made no arrests and had no clues to identify the slayers of the negro, A. C. Williams.

Taken From Ambulance
Four masked men, armed with guns took the negro from the county jail Monday after compelling Officer Dan Davis to open the cell doors. Last midnight the negro, severely wounded by pistol bullets and blows on the head, was

Lane Urges Sixth District Voters Back Mrs. Byron

Democratic Committeeman
Speaks at Hagerstown
Women's Club Rally

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 13 (P)—Close on the heels of her Republican opponent, Mrs. Katherine D. Byron, Democratic candidate for Maryland's Sixth district congressional seat, climaxed a day of campaigning in Washington county tonight at a rally of the county's Democratic Women's club.

W. Preston Lane, Democratic national committeeman, said he "wholeheartedly favored" the election of Mrs. Byron.

"The question to be decided today," he declared, "is whether democracy will be saved by the English speaking peoples. Mrs. Byron will support wholeheartedly the Roosevelt administration and anything it does insofar as the salvation of democracy is concerned."

Mrs. Byron Speaks

Lane urged the election of Mrs. Byron as "a democratic woman who will aid America in spite of Axis powers who seek to destroy democracy."

Mrs. Byron, who will oppose A. Charles Stewart, Prossburg Republican, at a special election May 27, spoke briefly—scarcely a minute—declaring her intention "to carry on for Bill's sake."

Mrs. Charles W. Tillet, assistant chairman of the Democratic national committee, paid tribute to Mrs. Byron's "humanitarian" work with the Red Cross, her efforts as a member of the Williamsport town council and her role as a mother.

Urges Woman's Election

"The responsibility of our government is on the Democratic party," she said, and urged the election of a woman "who will carry out the principles of the Democratic administration."

Other speakers included Mrs. Millard E. Tydings, wife of the Maryland senator; Mrs. Mary H. Davall, state chairman of the United Democratic Women's Clubs; Attorney General William C. Walsh; Mrs. Elizabeth Menefee of Cumberland, judge of the juvenile court; Mrs. Marie Colgan, Democratic national committeewoman; Mayor Richard Hawken of Williamsport; and Mrs. Brewer Stouffer, who presided as president of the Washington County Democratic Women's Club.

had certain marketing and producing advantages.

Balk At Wage Differential
This dispute over the differential caused the Southern group to bolt the joint Appalachian conference and establish its own bargaining agency. Southern miners are now being paid $6.50 a day under the tentative agreement which provides that any benefits resulting from continued negotiations be made retroactive to the date of resumption of work.

The Southern operations are in Southern West Virginia, eastern Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia. In making his announcement, Lewis said Southern operators had already increased their coal prices from 30 to 35 cents a ton and that this was more than sufficient to "cover every conceivable item of the yet unaccepted items" of the union's demands upon the south.

Lewis earlier had estimated that the union's demands, including elimination of the differential, would cost Southern operators 17 cents a ton.

Committee to Decide Monday
A Southern negotiator, L. T. Putman of Beckley, W. Va., said he saw no agreement in sight but added that the operators were not discouraged and were willing to continue negotiations. L. Eversole Gaines, chairman of the Southern group, said he had no comment on Lewis' work stoppage threat.

Lewis said he had informed Northern operators of the new situation and that they would come to New York next week to discuss the situation.

The miners' policy committee will meet Monday to decide the stoppage question.

found at a negro house near here by Sheriff Luten and others.

They placed him in an ambulance for transfer to a Tallahassee hospital, twenty-five miles away. Five miles from Quincy, a masked band stopped the unguarded ambulance and removed the negro. His body was found some five hours later.

Tied to Pecan Tree

Williams was arrested Sunday. No extra guard was placed at the jail because Sheriff Luten said there had been no indication of any mob violence and "I wasn't dreaming of any such thing." The ambulance from which Williams was removed was unguarded also, Luten explaining "I didn't expect any trouble of any kind."

State Attorney Parker said the negro was tied to a pecan tree Monday and made the target of bullets. Apparently, he said, the rope that bound him was severed by a shot and when the lynchers left, the negro ran to the house where the sheriff lives.

No formal charges had been placed against the negro.

INDIVIDUAL EXCESS PROFITS TAX IS PROPOSED

WASHINGTON, May 13 (P)—An individual excess profits levy, taxing wage and salary increases and other additions to income, was proposed today by the House Ways and Means committee today by A. Harding Paul, Washington attorney.

Paul, testifying in connection with treasury proposals to raise $3,500,000,000 additional revenue, suggested a levy similar to the corporation excess profits tax.

"Normal" income for the purpose of the tax, under his plan, would be ninety-five per cent of average earnings during 1936-39, inclusive. The tax would be thirty-three and one-third per cent of the first $25,000 of excess earnings and sixty-six and two-third per cent on all above that amount.

"Only by an excess profits or payroll tax," Paul contended, "can there be an adequate recovery by way of taxes of some of the billions being spent for armament."

George C. Lucas of New York, executive vice president of the National Publishers Association, Inc., said that large magazines and metropolitan newspapers should not be charged with more than a small portion of the $85,000,000 deficit reported by the postoffice department for second class mail, the classification publications use.

Lucas testified in connection with a recommendation by the joint Congressional Committee on Taxation that second class mail be placed on "a paying basis." The witness asserted that small pamphlets and non-profit publications accounted for a high percentage of the reported deficit.

Joseph Rosier

Chandler waved aside a second opportunity to put the senators on record with individual votes by refusing to ask a roll call on the subsequent question of whether Rosier should be seated. Only a few scattered "noes" were heard in the voice vote on final formal approval.

Martin sat in the gallery through most of the debate. He left smiling and shaking hands with friends. Later he said he immediately wired his congratulations to Rosier and added that he planned to return to his home in Martinsburg either tomorrow night or Thursday morning. He declined to comment on the Senate's decision.

Neely Is Pleased
CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 13 (P)—Governor M. M. Neely when informed tonight that his appointee, Dr. Joseph Rosier, had been chosen to succeed him in the United States Senate termed the action a "re-buke" to the "mental midgets who created this political tempest in a teapot."

Neely named Rosier, president of Fairmont State college and former Education Association head, in opposition to the appointment of Attorney Clarence E. Martin by his political enemy, former Governor Homer A. Holt.

Holt, who twice appointed Martin in a series of maneuvers before relinquishing the governorship, said he had no comment to make at present.

Neely and Holt were at odds throughout the former Governor's administration.

Full and Open Part In the War Advocated By Bishop Manning

NEW YORK, May 13 (P)—The Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, Protestant Episcopal bishop of New York, today advocated this nation's "full and open part" in the European war "while Great Britain still stands."

Addressing 700 delegates to the one hundred and fifty-eighth annual convention of the New York diocese, the cleric said the United States already was in the war and that it now was the nation's duty to "give our whole strength and power to bring this world calamity and world terror to an end."

Ridgely Maryland Observes Birthday

RIDGELY, Md., May 13 (P)—This quiet, shady Eastern Shore town observed its seventy-fourth "birthday" anniversary today.

There were no ceremonies, but citizens took occasion to look back upon the town's growth since its founding seventy-four years ago, and Miss Dorothy Mancha sent to city officials a pencil sketch by George Mancha of the town as it looked in 1870.

At that time, the only buildings were the railroad station, a hotel, and the home of James K. Saulsbury. Miss Mancha, a former resident of Ridgely, now a supervisor of music at the Walnut street school, Darby, Pa.

six-inch and smaller guns in a blast so strong that from my vantage point on an after conning tower it looked as if she were afire from stern to bow.

The Nazis had to go higher to escape the wall of fire, and again withheld their torpedoes. The anti-aircraft shells looked like multi-colored popcorn balls.

For an hour and fifteen minutes this continued. The sky became patchy with the puffs of black smoke from the guns.

Finally the planes dropped their torpedoes and bombs in the vicinity of the destroyers and sped back toward Sicily or Libya, having done no damage.

At the same time, Western Mediterranean naval units were bombed by Italian planes, but also were undamaged.

The sea-air fight was a followup to the bombardment of Bengasi Wednesday night (May 7) by a squadron led by the Cruiser Ajax, one of the victors over the Nazi Pocket Battleship Admiral Graf Spee in December, 1939.

Munitions Ship Sunk
Nosing into the mine-laden Libyan harbor the Ajax and four destroyers hurried about 100 tons of explosive shells, pounding the Mole and British observers said, scoring direct hits which set fire to two merchantmen in port.

Turning back after drawing the fire of shore batteries, the squadron intercepted two heavily-laden merchant ships outside.

One heavy blast from the guns exploded a 6,000-ton munitions ship, the British said, and the second and larger ship was ripped by shells which set off a series of smaller explosions and sent its deck load of trucks and tanks twisting high into the air.

On the way East before the Saturday night battle, an Italian life raft was picked up by the Destroyer Napier. Deserted, it had in it a bullet hole plugged with a seaman's sock. The British theorized that it might have been a raft of the Battleship Vittorio Veneto, which they believed more strongly than ever was sunk in the March 28 battle of Cape Matapan.

Mutual System Quits Radio Association

Disagrees over ASCAP Music War and Anti-Monopoly Policy

ST. LOUIS, May 13 (P)—The Mutual Broadcasting System, in disagreement with the two other major radio networks over the ASCAP music war and the government's anti-monopoly policy, late today broke off relations with the National Association of Broadcasters and three principal stockholders withdrew their membership.

They are the Bamberger Broadcasting Service, Inc. (WOR), Newark, N. J.; WGN Inc., Chicago, and the Don Lee Broadcasting System of Hollywood.

A fourth station, WFBR, Baltimore, which is to become a Mutual member Oct. 1, later announced it would follow suit.

Both WOR and WGN are 50,000 watt stations. The Don Lee System comprises several stations on the West Coast but it was said the bolt from NAB did not necessarily affect all of them.

Although rumored behind the scenes, the action came suddenly and threw the convention into temporary confusion just as it was adjourning for the day.

A few minutes before the National Association of Independent Network affiliates—private owned stations using network programs—had entered the fight against the Federal Communications Commission's recent order cracking down on the networks.

Reasons for Mutual's action were given in a letter to Neville Miller, president of NAB, from Alfred J. McCook, president of WOR and chairman of the board of Mutual.

"It is now entirely clear that your association is no longer representative of the entire industry," McCook declared, "and that you are taking a position in various matters adverse to our interests and in favor of those of others."

Miller could not be reached immediately for comment.

The other resignations were signed by E. M. Antrim, a WGN official and executive secretary of Mutual; Lewis Allen Weiss, general manager of the Don Lee System and Hope H. Barroll, Jr., executive vice president of WFBR.

Mutual as a network is not a member of the NAB. But it also was announced the network had withdrawn the name of Fred Weber, Mutual general manager, as its nominee for re-election as a representative on the board of directors of the association. The announcement further stated Mutual "will not be represented on this board in the future."

started operations, said the British who regarded the advance as counting "in force" to measure British resistance in the torrid desert.

"During the withdrawal, the enemy offered good targets to British airmen who attacked and inflicted some losses," the report said. Successes also were described in the Ethiopian theater, where 200 more Italians were said to have been captured as Imperial forces continued their closing-in tactics against the fortress of Amba Alaji, where 38,000 Italians are making a final stand.

Axial forces, stalled in repeated attempts to break through the defenses of the besieged Port of Tobruk in Libya, apparently waited for a let-up in the burning heat before taking another crack at the British situation "as the siege passed its fifth week."

The British Mediterranean fleet was back at anchor at Alexandria, refueling and taking on ammunition after an exciting week off in which it escorted long trains of supply ships eastward through the Mediterranean, fought off several spectacular attacks by Nazi torpedo bombers and made a side trip to bombard the Axis-held Port of Bengasi, Libya. Not a ship of the battle fleet was damaged, observers said.

Reliable sources here reported that Iraq was taking advantage of a Turkish offer to mediate the guerrilla warfare between the British and Iraqis. Egypt had offered to act as mediator, these sources said, but Iraq replied that Turkey's offer had been received first. The British communiqué made no mention of fighting in Iraq.

Captain James Roosevelt, son of the president, reached the Island of Crete on his tour of the Mediterranean war zone.

His Childhood Nurse, Paula Rudolf, Says

LONDON, May 13 (P)—"I refuse to believe Rudy is insane," Rudolf Hess's old nurse, Paula Rudolf, was quoted as saying tonight by Reuters news agency in an interview in Cairo, Egypt.

"There is either a serious Nazi split or he's got a far-reaching plan," said the nurse of the Egyptian-born Nazi leader who fled to Britain by air.

"I nursed him until he was a grown-up boy. He is broad-minded and has a strong character and is extremely honest."

Growing Season Is Retarded by Cool Weather

Unseasonable Advance in April Is Slowed Down in Recent Days

COLLEGE PARK, Md., May 13 (P)—Cool weather and "deficient moisture" in the last few days have slowed an "unseasonable advance" in April that put the growing season for Maryland crops two weeks ahead of normal.

Hot rainless days interspersed with cool periods and some rainfall brought the rapid advance in April, the Maryland crop reporting service said, and last month was the warmest April since 1921.

"Crops in general are not suffering unduly from adverse weather conditions," the service continued. "Recent showers have helped somewhat, though more moisture would be beneficial. The dry, hot period of April hastened growth of practically all crops, but cool days and deficient moisture have slowed this unseasonable advance."

"Small grains, truck, and hay crops especially will need moisture soon. Corn is being planted, though ground in many areas is becoming too dry and hard for proper preparation."

The service said the winter wheat acreage remaining for harvest is estimated at 338,000 acres, the same as harvested last year, but 57,000 acres less than the 1928-38 average. Rye remaining for harvest was estimated at 19,000 acres, with a total production of 238,000 bushels the service added.

Disclosure of

In speeches made over the last year Hess has said on one occasion that there could be no peace "until England is definitely struck down," again he said that "Divine justice" had turned against Britain.

It was declared emphatically that his flight would in no way affect internal or foreign policy; that it would not interfere with the pursuit of the war.

It was conceded that the extraordinary affair would be a great boon to British propaganda, but it was emphasized, too, that if the British had "any idea he is coming with a peace plan they are doomed to disillusion."

A qualified informant thus summed up the official German view: "The assumption that his curious conduct—which is a deep personal tragedy—was due to mental disorder is the most charitable view to be taken, and that view is to be held in view of the present knowledge."

Adolf Hitler himself took over Hess' old party office, which had been called "office of the deputy of the Fuehrer," and re-named it "party chancellery."

Hess Was Demoted

As to Hess' former position, a German spokesman explained it this way:

"What happened eighteen months ago (this was at the time that Hess was made Hitler's deputy) was that Hess, not promoted to third-ranking Nazi, but was demoted from second place.

"As deputy to Hitler he would have normally have succeeded to the fuhrership. But in view of the abilities and temperaments of the available men, Hitler by formal act chose Goering as his immediate successor."

The Nazi party's communiqué stated that Hess apparently had thought that through "old English acquaintances" he was "still able to bring about an understanding between Germany and England through personal action," and then went on:

"Rudolf Hess, as for years was known in the party, suffered seriously physically and recently restored increasingly to various aids, mesmerizers, astrologers and so forth x x x."

"It, however, also is imaginable that in the last analysis Hess intentionally was lured into a trap by the British."

"The entire manner of his procedure confirms in any case the previously stated fact that he suffered from hallucinations."

"Hess, whose field of duty lay exclusively within the party, has not had any clear conception about the execution or even about the consequences of his action as far as is discernible from his notes."

"The National Socialist Party regrets that his idealism fell victim to such fateful delusion. This will not interfere with the continuation of the war against England forced upon the German people."

"It will be carried on until—as the Fuehrer declared in his last speech—the British rulers are overthrown or ready for peace."

Chief Is Restored
MOUNT RAINIER, Md., May 13 (P)—Eugene B. Plumer, last year ousted as police chief of Mount Rainier, has been restored to his position by the town council.

"He appeared to be a little excited, but was perfectly sane," said Patterson. "He was immaculately dressed. His uniform was made of the finest material and he wore very fine leather top-boots."

"He had a very expensive camera around his neck, but he told us he hadn't taken any photographs. He also wore a magnificent bracelet watch."

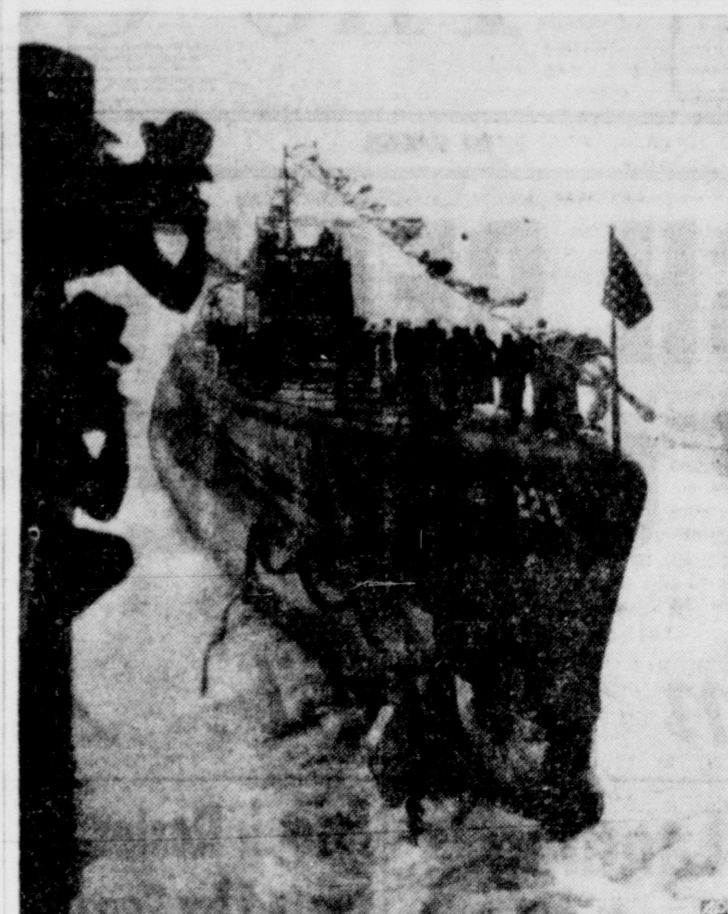

Hess' first act was to convince his captors he was not armed, smilingly inviting their search.

Still ignorant of Hess' identity, the Home guards carted him off to a hospital, relating "He thanked us for our kindness."

Hess first was taken to a Glasgow hospital, but as a precaution was moved later to a hospital in the country. A doctor who examined him said he had with him a stimulant for use in case of a heart attack or a parachute jump.

Reliable British sources said, "He appeared to be a little tired, and gave the impression to Kirkpatrick

NEW SUB FOR THE NAVY

The U. S. S. Drum, thirty-fifth submarine built at the Portsmouth, N. H. navy yard, slides down the ways at its launching. Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, wife of Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the United States marine corps, was the sponsor.

Scotland route, and a quantity of compressed food.

The extra gasoline tank, fitted to the Messerschmitt 110 so that Hess could be certain he would have enough gasoline for the trip, was dropped in the sea as he crossed the Scottish coast, Hess related.

The Home-guardsmen, Jack Patterson and Robert Gibson, related also Hess' story of how he tried to land the plane—the first Messerschmitt he ever had flown.

"I circled over the spot where I finally parachuted for a long time," he said, "but in the darkness I could not see a suitable landing place."

"Then I climbed several thousand feet, threw the plane over on its back and switched off the engine. Just as I was falling out I righted the machine again, switched on the engine and sent the plane hurtling to earth while I fell clear."

Did Not Discuss Bullet Holes
He said nothing about the ten bullet holes found in the tail of the wrecked plane—indicating he either was fired upon by German pursuers or caught in the gunshots of British fighters.

Patterson said Hess was completely calm when he talked to him; that he seemed more impressed by the availability of a drink of milk than by his own achievement, and that he gave his drinking cup to his guards as a souvenir.

The sturdy Scottish farmer who first approached Hess with a pitchfork, and the home guards to whom the farmer delivered him agreed that their remarkable prisoner was a polite, self-possessed fellow, and that they knew he must be important even though they did not at the time learn he was the No. 3 Nazi, making good an escape outwitting penny-dreadful fiction.

Farmer David McLean, in whose field Hess landed by parachute, helped the decamping Nazi leader into his house—since Hess limped from a broken bone in his left ankle—and offered him tea.

Hess refused, but chatted amiably and accepted a glass of water. After a time, McLean took him to a nearby airport and turned him over to Gibson and Patterson.

"I have no bombs in my plane, so you need worry," he told Gibson, speaking excellent English.

"While Hess talked, Patterson said, 'We offered him cigarettes, but he told us he didn't smoke. So when we asked him if he wanted a glass of milk he said 'have you got milk?'"

As if surprised that he had any. "He said, 'I've been in the air for four hours. I left Germany in a Messerschmitt 110 destroyer. Although I'm a skilled pilot, I am really a German army officer.'"

First Flight in Messerschmitt
That he is indeed a skilled pilot was suggested by a statement from informed British sources which said Hess was understandably tired "due to having carried out a remarkable flight of nearly 900 miles and bailing out, which experience he never had before, nor had he ever before flown a Messerschmitt 110."

"That flight obviously entailed a high degree of physical and moral courage."

But Hess did not discuss such matters with the farmer and the Home guards, even though he conversed freely.

"He appeared to be a little excited, but was perfectly sane," said Patterson. "He was immaculately dressed. His uniform was made of the finest material and he wore very fine leather top-boots."

"He had a very expensive camera around his neck, but he told us he hadn't taken any photographs. He also wore a magnificent bracelet watch."

Hess' first act was to convince his captors he was not armed, smilingly inviting their search.

Dan Cupid Riddles Ranks of Reserves At Naval Academy

Eighty of 590 Members of First Reservist Class in History To Wed

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 13 (P)—Dan Cupid has riddled the ranks of the reserve Midshipmen at the Naval Academy with his little bow and arrow.

Approximately 80 of the 590 members of the first reserve class in Academy history announced their intention of marrying—something the regular Midshipmen can't do until two years after graduation—within the next two or three weeks.

Some of the prospective bridegrooms who picture themselves in ensign uniforms marrying their sweethearts were swallowing hard today, afraid they might have bled (flunked) out.

"And at least one has climbed out on the proverbial limb. He already has sent out wedding invitations with the title 'ensign' printed before his name."

The official list of the graduating class and each members' orders has not yet been published. Several reservists received their "walking papers" today. They were notified by the academy board they had failed final examinations which ended last Saturday.

Gov. O'Connor to Present Diplomas
Commissions as ensigns will be presented at 11 a. m. Thursday in Dahlgren Hall by Governor O'Connor. Midshipman Robert Getz, of Cincinnati, O., has announced he would marry Miss Alice Tice in the Academy chapel that afternoon.

Midshipman R. H. Weeks, of Lake Charles, La., also said he would be married Thursday.

Midshipman P. N. Meros, of Florida, is to be married to a government worker from Washington Saturday at the Academy chapel. Her name was not disclosed. Others plan to wed in the near future.

Tomorrow will be a busy day for the reservists, whose parents and sweethearts are packing local hotels and boarding houses for the "June Week," which began Monday.

Reservists will rehearse the procedure for graduation tomorrow morning and at 11 a. m. will participate in a full dress parade on Worden Field, to be reviewed by Rear Admiral Russell Willson, Academy superintendent. The farewell ball will close the day's activities.

200 to Take Special Course
The 200 reservists who will return here later this month for a special advanced course in gunnery made arrangements for rooms today. Other groups are to undergo training in aviation, or be sent to the Naval Torpedo Station at Newport, R. I., and to the University of North Carolina for Diesel courses.

About thirty will be assigned to submarines, fifty as assistant communications officers and fifty others are to be given other fleet duties. A few will go on recruiting duty. The remainder will be given an inactive status.

Originator of "Be a Snob" Advice Dies at His Home
CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 13 (P)—Professor Robert Emmons Rogers, 53, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who achieved widespread fame a decade ago when he told his students to "be a snob—just as easy as marrying the boss' daughter as a stenographer," died tonight at his home.

He had been ill for the past seven weeks with a heart ailment and had been forced to give up

Experts To Study Problems in the Apple Industry

WASHINGTON, May 13 (P) — Secretary Wickard wrote Representative Cannon (D-Mo) today that he had appointed department experts to study problems peculiar to the apple industry.
Data relating to marketing and the place of the fruit in the nutrition program would be obtained, the secretary said.
Apple growers from Missouri, Kansas and other Midwestern states recently asked the agriculture department's assistance, declaring many trees in that area were killed by drought.

The first batch of P-38's is now rolling off the production lines for the United States and British air forces.

Deserted Wife Can Halt Divorce By Filing a Suit

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Good Manners and Good Taste — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A mother of three children who has been deserted by the husband and father writes me a letter and encloses her photograph. She asks me if any man would be ashamed to call her his wife.

Although she is undeniably pretty and attractively dressed, another woman has entered her Eden, and the husband declines to return to his wife and children. She asks: "Has the law no pity for a deserted wife and mother; is there not a law known as 'Restitution of Conjugal Rights'?"

Curiously enough, such a case came up in the District of Columbia courts last week. I do not know whether this law is in effect in all states, but my correspondent who asks if the law has no pity would do well to inquire.

The Washington lady, whose name I shall not give, told the court through her attorney that her husband had forced her to leave their apartment after he had become interested in another woman. She declared she left their home "reluctantly and unwillingly."

Divorce Refused

The husband, who appears to have been frankness itself, told her that he "would not live with her if she were the last woman in the world." The wife declined to consider his plea for divorce and has since attempted a reconciliation which has failed. She then demanded that the law take a hand in the matter and force the unwilling husband to return to her. That did not mean necessarily that the lady in question was dying of love.

Such a suit in the District of Columbia may mean only that a recent decision of the United States Court of Appeals has a certain bearing on this case. The appellate court ruled that a married person who deserted his mate could obtain a divorce after five years on grounds of voluntary separation, if the abandoned person had failed to make reconciliation efforts.

Evidence of Reconciliation

It was pointed out that even though the court ruled against the unnamed petitioner and declined to compel her husband to return to her, the suit was sufficient evidence of an attempted reconciliation, which would prevent her husband from getting a divorce in the nation's capital on the grounds of voluntary separation.

The decision of the appellate court, concerning "Restitution of Conjugal Rights" has brought to this column several divergent opinions. "If he wanted to go, I'd help him find his hat," writes another lady. Here's her spunky letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax: "Jim and I have been married for twelve years. We have two children and I think our family is happier than the average. But let Jim even hint that he'd like to live apart from the boys and me, I'd help him find his hat, pack his suitcase, and would even be willing to tell 'the other woman' his favorite dishes, and that she must not mind his untidy ways around the house. "When there is any compulsory element above love, it ceases to be love. "MRS. PEPPER"

Mr. Hoover Gives Food For Serious Thought

FORMER PRESIDENT HOOVER has expressed his well-considered conviction that this nation should not plunge into war now and gives substantial reasons for his conclusion.

Speaking as one who hates totalitarianism and from his experience as former president, former commander-in-chief of our armed forces and member of the War Council in the last war, which experience and the wisdom gained thereby are entitled to respect, Mr. Hoover has clearly summarized his position in the following words:

"That I support provision of the maximum tools of war to Britain; that I am convinced we can give this maximum during her next critical months only if we keep out of this war; that putting our navy into action is joining the war; that the whole European war is in transformation; that America is as yet unprepared even for adequate defense; that our people are not united."

One of the most impressive things here set down is the statement that the American people are not united on this war step. Mr. Hoover is right about that. This newspaper believes that an overwhelming majority of the people do not want to go into the war and that while they want to aid Britain all they possibly can they want to do so short of war. A minority is advocating the war step, and it is to be granted that they are motivated by considerations of first line defense and that as a minority they have equal right to their view even though it is bulwarked by a plainly discernible pressure of widespread propaganda.

But, as Mr. Hoover says, we must be a united people in so grave a step—"the government must be united with the will of the people" and "a divided people cannot act effectively in the supreme issue of total war." Perhaps consideration of this fact impelled President Roosevelt to postpone the address he was scheduled to make this Wednesday night, in which he was expected to give the people some needed information on the perplexing situation. One reason why the people are divided today is because they have not had all the facts presented to them. For this, those in authority who should present them are at fault.

Wherefore, as Mr. Hoover says, until the people are better informed than they have been and are not left to grope blindly in the dark, we must think over this grave step calmly and in all seriousness before we take it. His reasons should indeed be carefully pondered.

While Britain needs more merchant ships to supplant those which are being sunk with their precious cargoes, its greatest present need is more bombers to combat the cause of the sinkings. America can and should send those planes, the most of which can be delivered through the air; and it can supply the needed merchantmen, which it is now building. Here, apparently, is where America can the most effectively supply the needed tools.

There is little doubting that use of our navy and air force will engage us automatically in the war. And once in, we must wage it with our supreme efforts. That, as Hoover points out, means more production for our own defense and less for Britain. It means that Japan, with whom we are not now at war, will, as an ally of the Axis, become our enemy and that if we are obliged to exert our naval strength in the Battle of the Atlantic, Japan can be expected to make such moves as will cause this nation to strengthen its defenses in the Pacific. That, of course, would weaken the effort in the Atlantic.

The real question Mr. Hoover presents is that we should be of greater aid to Britain in remaining out of the war and continuing to supply it with its most needed weapons of combat. That may not be the correct answer, and if it is not, and the people are made to realize that it is not, they will undoubtedly become united in a total war effort, and that united will would be absolutely essential. But the considerations advanced by the former president are weighty and must be given careful thought now before it is too late. "Right now," he says, "we need calm thinking. We need reason. We need tolerance. We need to approach these problems with deliberation. Until this picture is more clear, it is folly to gamble with the fate of a nation. Strong men do not need to rush. We must not be swept off our feet by the profound depth of our emotions. By no hasty or emotional act must we jeopardize the aid to Britain and the future of America."

That, indeed, is the case. And this newspaper believes with the former president that it is due the American people that the Congress should determine the question as to whether this nation shall declare war on Germany, Italy and Japan.

A Necessary Habit For the Household

TEN THOUSAND TELEPHONE CALLS every day are ended with the words, "Good-bye. I've got to go. I smell something burning." Then the housewife rushes out to the kitchen to find that, when she answered the telephone, she forgot to disconnect her electric iron which is now burning a hole in her best dress.

Or it may be the curling iron searing the woodwork of her dressing table. Or the toaster charring bread. Or it may be that she has just used the explanation in order to get rid of a boroesome talker. Anyway, that's an idea to be employed in certain circumstances by those who have never thought of it, as it is a rattling good excuse.

Sometimes the housewife can save the situation but sometimes she finds that she must call the fire department, which is indicated by a report by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, now celebrating its seventy-fifth anniversary, that thousands of fires are caused each year by careless use of electrical apparatus.

Every housewife should form the habit of disconnecting any electrical appliance every time she leaves the room, even for a moment. Because she can never be sure she is leaving only for a moment. She may be delayed. If she makes a habit of disconnecting electrical appliances, that habit may save her life. A child once said, "Pies have saved the lives of a great many people by not being swallowed." Electric irons have saved the lives of a great many people by being disconnected.

Have you ever found yourself on a bus, miles from home, wondering if you turned off the toaster? And finally you got so worried that you turned around and went home, just to make sure?

Get the disconnecting habit.

Hope for Abolishing War Still Burns

THAT hope still springs within the human breast almost everywhere for a solid and enduring world peace after the present frightful holocaust of war has burned out, is indicated by a report concerning the old League of Nations.

It will probably be surprising to many to learn that no fewer than forty-eight nations of the world are still paying their dues for its support, or have expressed their willingness to make such payments. Evidently it is felt that the futile structure can be utilized for a practical realization of the great objective for which it was designed.

Among the nations contributing to the league are those embraced within the British commonwealth. During 1940, as in 1939, every nation in the commonwealth met its obligations to the league, despite the fact that those nations were at war. Even defeated France through the Vichy government has been trying to have some of its frozen assets in the United States released so that it can pay its share to the league. The Dutch government, though driven from home, has paid half of its 1941 contribution and Norway is willing to pay although prevented from doing so by the Nazi conqueror.

The old league was a futile and hopeless affair because it lacked the means of enforcement and because it was entangled with the Versailles Treaty, which history has proved was unsound politically and ethnologically, and not because the United States refused to join it. The fact that so many nations are still clutching at its framework does not mean that they still regard it as workable. Rather, it would appear that they hope for utilizing its structure as a framework for something sounder and better in a realization that mankind must seek to end the anarchy among nations and abolish war, which has become so horribly destructive through use of the modern weapons science has developed.

The Fluttering Curtain

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I pass down a little street off on the edge of town, a little street of poor little houses. . . . Not houses with pleasant gardens around them or well-tended lawns that the man of the house trims on a Sunday morning or waters after supper of a summer night. . . . But shabby little houses that need paint, that need some human pride about them to make them what they ought to be. . . . Little rented houses that have gone down in the world, or were never very high in the scale of man's pride.

And as I pass that way I see a man stop in front of one of those houses and scan the number to be sure he has the right place. . . . Just an average sort of fellow. With a kind face. . . . He has one of those thick leather folders in his pockets and it is crammed with bills. Someone has sent him here to collect a debt. . . . And he may get the money, but I'm thinking as I pass that he probably will not.

He swings open the rickety gate and walks up the concrete path, climbs the stairs to the shabby front door, rings the doorbell—and waits. . . . I don't stop but I do walk slowly. And what I expected to happen, happens.

The shades of the front room, the "parlor," are drawn. I see one of them move slightly and I know it is not the wind that does it. It is a woman looking out to see if a bill collector is there. She moves the curtain, sees the man—he doesn't see her—and turns to hush the children and tell them to be very quiet until the man has gone away.

The collector is a decent fellow. I need not look at him twice to know that. But he has the toughest job in life, trying to collect a just debt from someone who hasn't the money.

And so, because I happened to be there at that instant, I saw a miserable thing: I saw a window curtain flutter, and I knew a human spirit was crouching. . . . And I longed to be far away from there, as far as wheels or wings or the human spirit could take me. . . . Because I was powerless to help and I am a coward about such things and I cannot harden myself to all of life.

Automobile Tax Idea Nonsensical, Gen. Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

It goes without saying that we are going to be taxed as never before.

That is a matter of necessity. We are doing it to save our system. But there is another principle at the other horn of this dilemma. Chief Justice John Marshall stated it: "The power to tax involves the power to destroy." Instead of saving, taxes could destroy us.

War isn't the principal business of the United States as it was formerly said to be of Prussia. Industry, commerce and agriculture are what sustain us. Any tax that bears evenly on all maintains pretty well the power of each to exchange goods with the other, no matter how high the tax rate goes. But to the precise extent that you burden one out of proportion to the others, you depress the purchasing power of that one and drag down to some degree the whole structure. You may also tax out of us a necessity of life.

It is now proposed to put a flat twenty percent excise tax on the sale of every automobile—new or used or a flat $100 turn-over tax every time a motor car changes hands.

Nation on Wheels

The effect of any such nonsensical arbitrary action can scarcely be imagined. Whether for good or ill, this nation is on wheels. It has changed the whole face of our country-side. I can remember in the implement business when it used to be said that a farmer would not go farther than seven miles for repairs. Now he thinks nothing of going forty. That change dried up the little cross-roads general-purpose store. It wiped thousands of hamlets off the map. It made miniature metropolises out of better towns. It substituted real departmentalized schools for the little red district shack. It brought movies and much better merchandising and entertainment to the whole community.

In the larger cities, it enabled workers of all classes to move far out in the suburbs where their children could get air and sunshine. It made it easy to locate great factories far from congested slums and generally brightened the whole outlook of American life.

A Long Process

Many things were responsible for that but one stands out like a harvest moon. It was a reduction of about twenty percent of $100 from the price of the lower cost cars. That was done over a long period by executive genius and painful experiment and loss. The change that it wrought in our living was also a long process—Reorienting the map of the United States and the habits of our people. It seems that it can now all be undone in sixty seconds by a single federal fiat.

Well, maybe the law can be changed that easily but the condition which the law assaults cannot be changed without a long, long period of discomfort and even disaster to many people.

This is not a tax for revenue. It is said that this method is to be used to reduce the use of cars to speed up production of armament by greater use of automobile facilities. Well, there are many other and more ingenious things that can be done with no such disruptive effects to produce that result.

If some of these great thinkers and planners hadn't been asleep at the job for so many months and years, they wouldn't have now to awake with start and pull some such

Construction of the St. Lawrence seaway would dislocate and disorganize American business on a wide front. That is the gist of an important statement recently issued by the West Virginia Chamber of Commerce.

From the earliest days of this country's industrial development, the chamber explains, the ever-increasing flow of traffic from the Great Lakes region to the Atlantic seaboard has followed the pattern fixed in the most economic development of the most populous and industrially important section of the United States. It then says:

"The Great Lakes-Atlantic Coast railroad system . . . is the lifeline of a closely related and far-flung economy. This transportation system is magnificently adequate, and it is not an unimportant factor that central Canada's immense shipments of grain and other products which now help support it would be irrevocably lost if the St. Lawrence waterway should be constructed." The essence of the proposal, it adds, is that "we shall now provide a tax-subsidized substitute for this great network of railroads and highways, thereby dealing a mortal blow not only to the transportation system but to the economy which has grown up around it."

There is no lack of adequate and cheap transport in the St. Lawrence region—even as there is no lack of electric power. In essence, the St. Lawrence proposal amounts to spending hundreds of millions of the taxpayers' money to create tax-free, tax-subsidized transport and power services which are already provided by privately-financed, heavily-taxed, publicly-regulated private industry. At this time when the full effort of private enterprise in all its branches is needed to complete the defense program and every dollar of government money must be applied to necessary purposes, the St. Lawrence plan is best described as an economic monstrosity.

Newspapers usually don't become admirals but here is an admiral who's become a newspaperman. Admiral Clark H. Woodward, U. S. monstrosity as this to make up for their own drowsiness.

The Easiest Lever

Furthermore, regardless of that time lost, among the many other means available to reach these ends, it is up to them to use a little of the ability for which they were put in their jobs to select other equally effective and less explosive means instead of reaching for the first and easiest lever regardless of the harm it does to the less well-to-do among our people.

One hundred extra dollars on the price of a new or used car isn't going to put the rich man to panhandling the streets but to the guy who gets less than $2,000 a year and is already paying twenty percent hidden taxes, $100 more for an automobile is a minor tragedy.

An Economic Monstrosity

From the Industrial News Review

Construction of the St. Lawrence seaway would dislocate and disorganize American business on a wide front. That is the gist of an important statement recently issued by the West Virginia Chamber of Commerce.

From the earliest days of this country's industrial development, the chamber explains, the ever-increasing flow of traffic from the Great Lakes region to the Atlantic seaboard has followed the pattern fixed in the most economic development of the most populous and industrially important section of the United States. It then says:

"The Great Lakes-Atlantic Coast railroad system . . . is the lifeline of a closely related and far-flung economy. This transportation system is magnificently adequate, and it is not an unimportant factor that central Canada's immense shipments of grain and other products which now help support it would be irrevocably lost if the St. Lawrence waterway should be constructed." The essence of the proposal, it adds, is that "we shall now provide a tax-subsidized substitute for this great network of railroads and highways, thereby dealing a mortal blow not only to the transportation system but to the economy which has grown up around it."

There is no lack of adequate and cheap transport in the St. Lawrence region—even as there is no lack of electric power. In essence, the St. Lawrence proposal amounts to spending hundreds of millions of the taxpayers' money to create tax-free, tax-subsidized transport and power services which are already provided by privately-financed, heavily-taxed, publicly-regulated private industry. At this time when the full effort of private enterprise in all its branches is needed to complete the defense program and every dollar of government money must be applied to necessary purposes, the St. Lawrence plan is best described as an economic monstrosity.

What particularly interests me is the item of income taxation as it'll hit us middle bracket victims. There also will be various excises and nuisance levies and perhaps sales imposts, too. Well, we can ration ourselves, thus partially discounting that classification of ex-tortions. Indeed, that's the economists' air, which is to prevent inflation by curtailing our buying power.

No Economizing Here

But you can't economize on an income tax. Not being a plutocrat, I'm not much concerned as to that group's fate. Indeed, I understand that they won't be much hiked. They're so severely soaked already that the government can't greatly boost 'em without taking their all and more too—more, too, being uncollectable.

The very low outlays hardly are worth bothering with. Either they literally can't pay at all or they can't pay enough to signify. We middle bracketers are the bunch who'll get hiked. We, collectively, are worth sticking. Our exemptions (for dependents, etc.) will be reduced. Our assessments will be shoved up. Dear reader, you will be shocked up. Next time it'll be at least fifty per cent more, possibly twice what it was, maybe three times!

Credit Would Slump

Yet, according to the economists, what'll happen if Uncle Sam doesn't take steps to keep his mounting indebtedness under control?

Why, his credit will slump. That is, his money won't be worth as much as it has been. In other words, prices will go up to beat the architects well before commercial hand. It'll be equivalent to a fierce production got on its feet.

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Federal taxes will be collected next year and probably on into near-eternity with two ends in view.

One is to raise money to meet Uncle Sam's current expenses and to pay interest and a little of the principal on the debt he's piling up by the billions recently. The other's to prevent Robert Doughton living costs from skyrocketing indefinitely in the heavens.

Congressman Robert L. Doughton, as chairman of the House of Representatives Ways and Means committee, has been doing the lion's share of headaching over the problem lately, since all such legislation has to originate in the lower chamber on Capitol Hill and that committee must draft it initially, after which the whole house tinkers with it for awhile and finally passes it, maybe somewhat altered.

Then Chairman Pat Harrison's senatorial finance committee and subsequently the whole Senate will take a crack at the proposition, as presented by the House. Ultimately the two branches will come to an agreement and the law will be enacted.

Much Advice Given

Naturally, Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau and an assorted lot of economists are doing plenty of advising President Roosevelt likewise has his ideas. But, in the last analysis, the puzzle's up to Congress.

It'll be a matter of weeks or maybe two or three months before the coming tax schedule is revealed to us definitely. We can depend on one thing confidently, though. From the taxpayers' standpoint, it'll be a sockdolager.

What particularly interests me is the item of income taxation as it'll hit us middle bracket victims. There also will be various excises and nuisance levies and perhaps sales imposts, too. Well, we can ration ourselves, thus partially discounting that classification of ex-tortions. Indeed, that's the economists' air, which is to prevent inflation by curtailing our buying power.

G-Men Watchful In Forestalling Sabotage Fires

By EDWIN C. HILL

Sunday news and radio commentators get it "right out of the feed box" that when and if the shooting starts there will be a way of sabotage of industrial and munitions plants all over the country.

Some of these "tips" are supposed to have come from the FBI. The story is that a vast spying and wrecking organization has been built up during the last two years; that its conspirators have penetrated defense personnel and are ready to touch off widespread ruin when they get the word.

In this corner, we are inclined to doubt whether the FBI men are as gossipy and garrulous as all this. They are tight-lipped lot, for good reason, and I don't think they're dishing any deep inside to anybody whomsoever. It wouldn't be like them. The alarmist stories refute themselves. Their accounts of the readiness of the saboteurs, and the FBI awareness thereof, are so explicit that they appear to make the G-men just innocent bystanders if they let the wrecking come off. We don't think they will.

Not Sitting Around

Reading the FBI Enforcement Bulletin for May, widely distributed and available to anyone who wants it, gives one ample assurance that the G-men aren't just sitting around admiring each other. There is abundant space given to foreign sabotage and our protection against it. But they are calm about it and take great pains not to get anybody unduly excited. A sample of their bits of timely information is given under the heading "Sabotage Through Fire."

"Fire as a medium of general sabotage and aimed at the destruction of the national defense program," it stated "must be considered a very serious possibility. It is not the desire of the FBI to stir up hysteria on the subject, but the situation must be regarded in a calm, business-like way and the existence of the threat must be realized. Even if this threat should never manifest itself, we must be prepared."

"Arson as committed by the saboteur is more serious, more dangerous than the ordinary commercial type of arson which we seek to combat in peace-time. The saboteur is the agent of the foreign government and has at his disposal resources, information and funds far greater in amount than any commercial arsonist."

Carefully Concealed

"One objective of any enemy agent is to stop production, and one possible answer may be sabotage so carefully concealed, so carefully planned, that it does not appear to be sabotage at all. Sabotage by fire is one of the most plausible means of accomplishing this end. How will the arsonist get into plants where federal contracts are under way? Vulnerable spots must not only be checked, but also every possible method by which instruments of arson might be brought into the plant must be considered. The arsonist can equip himself with the necessary implements of fire in very compact and easily hidden form."

In the last war, the favorite method was the use of small incendiary devices composed of two sections filled with chemicals, separated by a thin metal partition. When the latter had been eaten through by electrical action, the substances mixed and a fire resulted. Its starting action was timed accurately hours in advance. The thickness of the partition governed the starting time, which made it especially easy to divert suspicion. The fire would appear to be entirely accidental, since it would occur in the dead of night when nobody was in the plant."

Big Damage Wrought

There you have the "fountain pen" bombs of the last war. Foreign agents did damage of $200,000,000 in factories and munitions plants before we caught up with them. John Edgar Hoover heads brilliantly and effectively the best police organization in the world, and it is an organization which has developed and proved many new scientific techniques.

It is foolish to think that these trained specialists haven't been on the job every minute of the day and night, as the sabotage danger came nearer. If you don't believe it, just try strolling casually around any shipyard or plant where defense work is going on. A friend of mine, visiting a freighter in Baltimore which was being loaded with nitrates, said he had to show enough credentials to get Al Capone into the Union League Club before he could get within a mile of the ship.

"Elijah" To Be Presented Tonight at Allegany High

Jack Platt Will Direct Choral Society in Oratorio

The final rehearsal for the oratorio "Elijah" was held last evening by the choral society and the Cumberland Choral Society. The two hour performance will be given this evening at Allegany high school auditorium, beginning promptly at 8:30 o'clock.

There are two separate parts to the "Elijah" and it is often presented on two consecutive evenings; however, this evening's performance will be the entire oratorio and Jack Platt, the director, requests that because of the nature of the oratorio and its high quality, so as not to break the continuity of the story, that applause be withheld until the end of the performance.

In the "Elijah" there are choruses, solo, trios, quartets and double quartets. Assisting the soloists of the chorus are Mrs. Blanche Stanton, Miss Mary Robb, Robert Moreland, John Metzger, John McDonald and Benjamin McCracken. James Trenton, a fifth grade Allegany high school student, will sing the part of the youth. Because the accompaniment is so very difficult it has been necessary to have Eugene Bossart as assisting pianist.

Platt said last evening that there is no doubt in his mind that this is the outstanding musical event of the season. The local chorus was worked since Christmas and Platt himself has been working for a year for tonight's performance.

It is unusual to have these four artists, Donald Hultgren, Miss Barbara Troxell, Miss Catherine Latta and Robert Gay, who have been selected from a large group to be here tonight, considering they have been on the metropolitan audition, with the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, with the Philadelphia Opera Company and the Philadelphia Symphony.

All of the soloists have commented on how fortunate Cumberland is to have a performance of the "Elijah" for few choruses ever attempt this difficult oratorio.

Platt wishes Miss Althea Birchard to receive credit for her untiring work in organizing the society with him, and acting as secretary besides being the accompanist at each rehearsal.

The doors will be open at 7:30 o'clock and the performance will start at 8:30 promptly. No tickets are necessary for admission and the performance is open to the public. Because of the expense involved in the production it will be necessary however to take up a silver offering at intermission.

THE DAILY STORY

RESCUE

The Story of a Storm and How It Vindicated a Wise Man's Prophecy and a Brave Man's Courage

By MARTIN ROWAN

Intense silence fell on the fishermen of Ballycladdy that bright, calm afternoon as they stood in a semi-circle around the door of Shawn Na Nyonguch's house (John of the Nets), who for 40 years had been recognized as their leader and their weather prophet.

Shawn, his broken leg in splints, his giant frame reclined in a battered wicker chair, spoke in a grave tone—unmindful of the impatient, ill nature of Eamonn Dhoo, black-bearded, scowling skeptic of the fleet.

"It is the advice I would give you not to pass the line between the point of Currawn Bawn and Saddle Head this day," Shawn told the men. "Stay well within a league of shore. It was spits of yellow froth that the sea spewed up last night, with specks of white through them, and a warning wall was in the waves. It is how a storm will break before the dusk."

"It is how you had high value on your hide always, Peadhar Rue," jeered Eamonn Dhoo, and he winked at the assembled fishermen. Three of them—his own crew—laughed. The others maintained stolid faces.

In the brief, embarrassed silence that followed, a tall lean well-dressed man moved forward from the rim of the crowd. There was a lithe grace to his step and the gray of middle age was silvering his temples.

"In the year that I have lived among you, gentlemen," he said, "I have never heard anything but sound advice and accurate weather predictions from Shawn Na Nyonguch."

"And by what right is it that you speak for the men of Ballycladdy, Forsythe?" said Eamonn Dhoo truculently. "What knowledge is there at you of the sea? Or fishing? Or weather? It is only four times I saw you sail the bay with the fleet and one of these times I saw you tremble like a rabbit as we passed the reef of Currawn Bawn. It is better knowledge you have of a bottle than a boat."

Three of them laughed.

Hot anger flushed the face of Forsythe as he stepped close to Eamonn Dhoo.

"Take back those words, Eamonn Dhoo," he commanded, and the crack of the whip was in his tongue. "My knowledge of the sea excels yours. There was a day when I was her master. There was a day when—" Forsythe stopped abruptly, his shoulders drooped, and the fire in his eyes smoldered into dying embers.

Eamonn Dhoo laughed scornfully. He half lifted his clenched fist as if to strike the older man.

With dusk an ink-black cloud shrouded Saddle Head and the wind rose with the coming of night. Madly it tore across the sea raising mountainous waves that smashed upon the shore with a mighty roar until it appeared that the legions of hell were let loose upon the rocks of Ballycladdy. Forked lightning flashed and growling thunder rolled in from the headlands.

Forsythe, battling against the storm, fought his way to Shawn Na Nyonguch's door. He staggered inside, his face and oilskins glistening with rain and confronted Shawn and Peadhar Rue who sat smoking by the fire. "Eamonn Dhoo and his crew will be lost tonight, unless we go to their rescue, Shawn," he said calmly. "There is but little time to lose."

"Only once have I seen a worse storm in Ballycladdy, Mr. Forsythe," said Shawn. "That was 18 years ago when the English destroyer, Boyne, was smashed to pieces on the reef of Currawn Bawn."

Shawn Na Nyonguch turned to Forsythe. "There is but one man who knows the trick of wind and wave and current well enough to lead a crew of rescue this night, Mr. Forsythe," he said, knocking the fire from his pipe. "It is I who am that man, and it is I who will lead that crew."

"Crippled as you are, Shawn, you could not lead a rescue," Forsythe replied gravely. "Let me guide the crew."

"The men, women and children of Ballycladdy with the priest and doctor in their midst, lined the shore as the storm blew a tortured dawn over the grim rocks of Currawn Bawn. Silent they stood—silent as the bleak rocks themselves. "It is how I see a black speck crossing the line," said Nora Dan, whose husband and brother were drowned two years before, and whose son Peadhar was now a member of Eamonn Dhoo's crew.

"It is a boat that is in it, sure enough, Nora," said Father Anthony.

"It is but one boat, father," and there was alarm in the voice of Peadhar Rue.

"Forsythe took six men did he not, Peadhar?" inquired Dr. O'Reilly.

"Six of the boldest and bravest, Doctor."

"And there were four men in Eamonn Dhoo's boat?"

"Four men, Doctor," answered Peadhar Rue.

"There should be 11 men in the boat, if they are all safe," said Dr. O'Reilly. "I count but 10 men in the boat coming down the bay."

The boat slid down the last wave and ground her bow on the pebbled beach below Shawn Na Nyonguch's door. Ten men sat in the boat. The eleventh, his head pillowed in Eamonn Dhoo's lap, lay in the bottom. It was the man called Forsythe with pallid face strangely relaxed.

"It was how poor Forsythe found us clinging to our boat as it was being smashed on the rocks of Innish Ullra," said Eamonn Dhoo, in a broken voice. "It was hard work taking us aboard and the poor man not used to the sea and him a drinking man. It was how he fainted on us just as we crossed the reef of Currawn Bawn."

Dr. O'Reilly felt the pulse of Forsythe. He then took his stethoscope and placed it over his heart. The crowd waited silently. Dr. O'Reilly stood erect.

"Forsythe died crossing the reef of Currawn Bawn," he said simply.

The watchers stood rooted for a long moment. No one spoke. No sob was raised. No face betrayed emotion.

THINNING FOR PLUMPER VEGETABLES

When planting carrots in the vegetable garden choose a place which is not too stony. If this is impossible, take care to remove as many stones as possible before planting the seeds. If the soil is heavy, add sand, wood ashes or clean grit, and mix it well to loosen it. Otherwise try to grow only the stump-rooted varieties, such as Ox-heart.

This Garden-Graph shows the results, in twisted and deformed roots.

RESULT OF NOT THINNING

of not thinning the young plants sufficiently. The early, small carrots should be thinned two inches apart and the later, larger varieties to four inches apart.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

IT HADN'T BEEN easy to get rid of the newspaper men. But they were gone at last, and Betsy suggested hospitably to the colony, "It's too late for a real meal. Why don't we just scratch up something here and have it together, picnic fashion?"

The others shouted approval, and Betsy, Mrs. Edmonds and Terry disappeared into the kitchen to make sandwiches, salad and tea.

"Wonder where June is?" exclaimed Terry as she assembled lettuce and tomatoes and hunted for the salad bowls.

"I wonder where Brooks is," suggested Mrs. Edmonds. There was a curious infection in her voice that made Terry and Betsy look at her questioningly.

"Meaning just exactly what—or shouldn't I ask?" suggested Terry mildly—too mildly, for there was a glint in her eye that indicated she still had reserves against liking Mrs. Edmonds any too much.

Mrs. Edmonds smiled faintly and kept her eyes on the sandwiches she was cutting.

"Oh, I don't imagine he liked being labeled 'The Million Dollar Husband' very well. And there were some other things the newspapermen said," she added coolly. "He looked rather—well, rather black when he stalked away."

"I thought he looked like Laurence Olivier in a temper—and that looks pretty good to me," said Terry promptly. "Brooks is a pretty swell guy. Anybody want to make anything out of that?"

Mrs. Edmonds laughed, and her thin, penciled brows went up in a little look of amused dismay. "My dear," she protested prettily. "Put down that wicked-looking knife when you speak in that tone. The two together are simply too dangerous. All I meant was that Brooks looked as though he'd like some solitude to get over his—well, shall we call it embarrassment?"

"And why should he be embarrassed?" demanded Terry, still beligerently. "After all, Natalie's got such swads of money—I don't suppose there's a man in the country with enough money to marry her and escape being called a fortune hunter. But Natalie's plenty human and plenty swell—and she's crazy about Brooks. I think it was darned swell of her to hand him a million bucks so he could have his own pocket money after they were married. A lot of women in her position might have gone around making Friend Husband hold out his grumpy little paw every time he wanted 5 cents for a package of gum."

"Well!" said Mrs. Edmonds in delicate disdain.

Terry stared at her for a moment, then threw down the knife with which she had been peeling tomatoes and stalked out of the kitchen, too angry to speak. She pushed open the swinging door and all but fell over Natalie, who stood with her slim back pressed hard against the door at the other end of the tiny pantry. Her first startled look at the girl's white face and tortured eyes told Terry that Natalie had overheard the whole conversation.

Terry was tongue-tied for a moment.

"It's quite all right, Terry," said Natalie after a moment. "I proved an old adage wrong—the one about eavesdroppers hearing no good of themselves. Thank you for sticking up for me."

"The Edmonds creature gets in my hair," Terry exploded. "She's always so darned busy minding other people's affairs!"

"Maybe that's because she hasn't any of her own, eh?" said Natalie, and tried to smile, though her eyes were sick with pain. Far too much pain to have been caused by overhearing the more or less harmless words that Terry and Mrs. Edmonds had exchanged in the kitchen.

"Look here, Natalie, you're not going to let that old cat get under your skin?" Terry burst out childishly, caring not a hoot that Mrs. Edmonds might very easily hear her.

"She just talks to hear her brains rattle," Natalie shook her head. "No, of course I don't mind what Mrs. Edmonds said," she answered, so softly that Terry had to lean close to hear her words. "But—oh, Terry, Terry—something has happened that's sort of snatched the ground from under my feet, and I'm scared. Terry, I'm so terribly scared."

Terry put quick, comforting arms about her as though Natalie had been the younger. "Don't, Natalie. Nothing's as bad as all that."

"This is," said Natalie faintly. "It's much worse. I was looking for Brooks a while ago. And I found him—way down the beach—with June in his arms."

It took a full moment for the significance of that to sink into Terry's startled, ordinarily alert young mind. And when it did she caught her breath and gasped, before she could check her words. "Why, the good for nothing pup!" Natalie winced. "No, he's not. Terry, he's fine and decent—and everything I wanted in a man. It's I who have failed him somewhere."

"You!" Terry fairly snorted. "You've given him the world on a solid gold platter."

"Maybe that's just it, Terry. Maybe he'd rather have worked for it—with someone like June," said Natalie, tortured with the memory of that moment when she had stood there, dazed and incredulous, watching that unbelievable scene; her husband a bridegroom, making love to another man's bride. It sounded like something in a French farce—not the sort of thing that happens in real life; not in HER life.

"Have you told Donald?" asked Terry after a moment.

"No, of course not—why should I?" Natalie answered almost haughtily.

Terry shrugged, ran nervous fingers through her already tumbled curls, and flung out her other hand in a little gesture of helplessness. "Well, after all, he IS her husband. It seems to me he ought to be at least mildly interested in such shenanigans," she pointed out with deceptive mildness. "But of course I could be wrong about that. I've been wrong about a lot of things in my time."

"This concerns only Brooks and me," said Natalie steadily. "If Brooks wants a divorce, I shall give it to him, of course."

"Sure," said Terry, and made no secret of her supreme disgust at that. "You would. You're soft—much too soft to fight. So you'll just be ladylike and refined. You make me sick!"

"What else could I do?" Natalie stammered.

"Being you—nothing," answered Terry sharply. "But if it was me—if some other woman took my Bill—it would be over my dead body. But then, of course, I haven't been brought up as a lady. I've always fought for what I wanted, and the battle I'd put up against any woman who wanted my Bill would make a May Day riot look like a Sunday school picnic."

"But—to try to hold a man who no longer wants you—Natalie shivered and set her teeth. "I couldn't, Terry—I couldn't! After all, a woman has to have some pride!"

does it again!

The Company that gave America its FIRST special motor fuel is now FIRST AGAIN...with new, mightier HYDRO-FORMED AMOCO!

Over twenty-five years ago, the American Oil Company gave Amoco-Gas to the public. It was the first special motor fuel—making possible the high compression automobile motor.

At first people smiled—wondered why a special fuel was necessary. Then they tried Amoco-Gas, and discovered that they obtained performance and economy absolutely impossible for any ordinary gasoline to deliver.

Steadily Improved, Year by Year

As motors became more powerful, as compression increased, as operating temperatures moved up, Amoco-Gas kept pace, stepping up quality and efficiency with each motor improvement.

Amoco Does It Again!

For years chemists and engineers have striven to improve gasoline efficiency even more, by regulating its combustion in the cylinders. They knew that if a way could be found to cut down violent, explosive shock, much power-waste could be eliminated—transformed into useful energy.

Hydro-forming Solves The Problem!

Now the problem has been solved by the revolutionary new Hydro-forming Process of refining gasoline, pioneered by the American Oil Company, and used to make Hydro-formed Amoco-Gas.

Hydro-forming imparts new and even mightier qualities to Amoco. Most important of all, it permits combustion control—Flame Control!

Flame Control Gives Cushioned Power!

Hydro-formed Amoco-Gas burns in a different way. Flame Control reduces violent, explosive shock, cuts down waste, and produces more useful energy. Cushioned Power now replaces severe detonation—delivers a satin-soft, s-m-o-o-th surge of energy—a flow of driving power that follows the pistons through their entire course. Vibration is hushed—destructive pounding on bearings and moving parts is reduced.

Better Road Octane!

Official results of road tests by Industry Committees show that conventional gasolines, on the average, lose octanes on the road. Hydro-formed Amoco-Gas actually gains them—surpassing laboratory figures because its knock-arresting constituents become vaporized, distributed more evenly and impartially to all cylinders alike.

An All-time High in Quality!

Good as Amoco-Gas has always been, it is now mightier than ever—reaching an all-time high in quality and efficiency. Everything that makes for outstanding performance moves to new levels. Point for point, it is the finest motor fuel we have ever produced.

Test Hydro-formed Amoco-Gas yourself! Compare it feature for feature, with any other gas you have ever used. See how it outdates your old conception of quick starting, of getaway and pickup, of pulling power and mileage.

Never before have we made such a mighty motor fuel!

Always the best—now better than ever!

Stock Market Struggles To Hold Early Gains; Many Issues Decline

Steels and Rails Are among Stocks Which Closed Weaker

By BERNARD S. O'HARA
NEW YORK, May 13 (AP)—The stock market struggled feebly to hold a mild early rally today but light selling after mid-day converted initial gains of fractions to a point or so into declines in many cases at the close.

Wall street tried to read bullish implications in the mysterious flight of Nazi chieftain Hess from Germany but buyers were notably hesitant in risking much cash on their interpretations. Another restraining influence, brokers said, was the cancellation of the president's scheduled speech tomorrow.

Some bidding was attributed to favorable business items but more labor controversies threatening defense work served as an offset. Transfers totalled 431,850 shares compared with 435,320 yesterday.

One of the highlights of the financial picture was a bulge in agricultural commodities as indications pointed to quick passage by congress of the bill for eight-five per cent parity loans on farm products. Steers and rails, among stocks weakened at the last with United States Steel, Bethlehem, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central and Southern Pacific ending well under water. Other losers included Ammonia, United States Rubber, Montgomery Ward, American Telephone, Union Carbide, Consolidated Edison and United States Gypsum.

Atlantic Coast Line registered a new high for the year and ended up 1/2 at 29 1/2, when the road disclosed first quarter net of $4.07 a share against ninety-two cents in the like 1940 period.

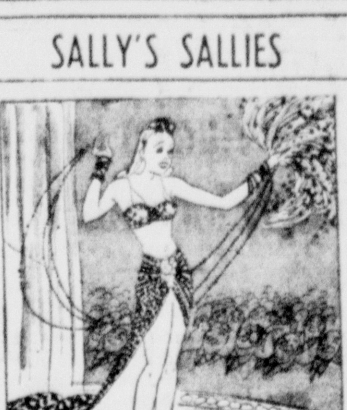

Du Pont was up two points and lesser improvement was shown for Westinghouse, American Can, Douglas Aircraft, J. I. Case, International Harvester, Western Union, Standard Oil of N. J. and Kennecott. Western Union Directors, after the close, voted a dividend of $1 a share on the common, the same as disbursed in December.

Ahead in a spotty curb were Humble Oil, Gulf Oil, N. J. Zinc and American Gas. On the offside were Babcock and Wilcox, Aluminum Ltd., Lake Shore and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Volume here approximated 75,000 shares versus 68,000 Monday.

Science Is Making Strides Forward In Fight against Diseases of Heart

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
The intensive study of heart disease which has been made in the last twenty-five years has begun to give good results, as is indicated by an article from two Philadelphia physicians, who summarize the evidence to show that the outlook in heart disease is better today than it was a quarter of a century ago. It was once a sort of accepted idea that heart disease was hopeless and that the patient was doomed to a life of invalidism. Neither of these ideas remains true today.

Of the various causes of heart disease, we may say that the infections, rheumatism and syphilis are both better treated than they were two decades ago, and the modern treatment leaves the patient with heart disease in better condition to face the future without danger of early circulatory failure than he was at that time.

We have often pointed out in these articles that acute articular rheumatism is a disease, not of the joints, but of the heart and that the greatest care should be taken with these patients to insist on a long period of rest and care after the acute symptoms have subsided. This makes much for the prevention of late crippling forms.

The Thyroid Gland

Another large field of potential heart damage lies in disease of the thyroid gland and here modern medical management and surgical management have done much to step in and prevent these patients from going on to a period of crippling disease. The thyroid can be removed or quieted in its early stages long before it has had an opportunity to continue to be poisonous and by the secretion of its poisons cause serious crippling damage to the heart muscles. The same is true of conditions of lowered secretion of the thyroid gland, which occur in middle-aged women and men. Nowadays our ability to detect these cases has greatly improved and our methods of treatment take them out of the field of the chronic invalid.

In the great field of arteriosclerosis, one of the prominent causes of heart disease, we are able to do much by early treatment of diabetes, which so often complicates the picture.

Heart Surgery

The surgery of the heart in some respects has enabled us to prevent certain crippling mechanical deformities. Besides this, our understanding of different forms of medication for the heart has greatly improved so that nowadays the use of foxglove and of drugs to relieve shortness of breath and dropsy is far in advance of what it was twenty or thirty years ago.

It may not be quite fair to say that cure occurs in cases of heart disease, but there are plenty of examples of people who have once been considered hopeless invalids who have been rescued by modern methods of treatment from such a life, so that they are able to carry on ordinary activities with comfort and without depending on others for their livelihood and happiness.

The modern clinic in heart disease is one that is permeated with a spirit of hopefulness and optimism.

Questions and Answers

C. B. T.—(1) Is thick, slow flowing blood an indication of any kind of disease or lack of something in the diet? (2) Is a massed infection caused by hereditary disease?

Answer—(1) I doubt if anybody on earth could make a diagnosis of thick, slow flowing blood, and in health it is very unlikely that it ever occurs. (2) Heredity has nothing to do with mastoid disease. It is caused by infection of the throat going up the Eustachian tube in the middle ear.

Average Student Can Improve Efficiency if He

Acquires Courage

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

You and I and our children could be so much more happy and likeable and could think and speak so much more clearly, comfortably and effectively in public if we conquered the fears and feelings of self-consciousness which beset us then.

For a number of years I have been studying this phenomenon and have concluded that although it may at times goad us in to greater effort, it hinders us seriously in many ways. I believe the average student in high school and college could improve his efficiency in the classroom as much as a hundred per cent if he acquired courage to feel entirely at ease as he spoke before his classmates.

Yesterday I told you of my meeting hundreds of student assemblies with a view to gain more information about these disturbing feelings in class or elsewhere and to offer a few suggestions on the cause of these fears and their gradual mastery.

I told you that after I would talk fifteen or twenty minutes I was able to win the confidence of my young auditors so as to make them feel assured that no one would laugh at them when they spoke, that individual students soon would be rising from where they sat throughout the audience and volunteering a description of their emotional experiences when they tried to speak in the classroom or other groups. Whether the number of students in the assembly numbered few or thousands, individuals freely rose to testify. With but a single exception, there was such voluntary response from every one of the 250 odd assembly groups in half the states of the Union. The cause, I think, of this single exception was an austere, pompous principal who sat on the platform. I believe his very presence from the students into silence. In one group of seventy-five high school seniors every member described some sort of self-consciousness which impaired his ease, comfortableness and force of expression as he tried to speak in class.

Individual Testimonies

Here are a few actual samples of individual testimonies: "My hands sweat," "I get out of breath," "I shake all over," "I forgot what it was I wanted to say," "Sometimes I can't hear myself talk at all," "I feel weak in my stomach," "It seems to be listening to myself talk like a machine," "I feel something might be wrong with my clothing," "I get seasick just before I have to speak," "I keep wondering what wisecrack the teacher is going to make when I finish," "Words won't come out," "My Adam's apple feels five times its real size," "I wonder why the high school rooms do not have trapdoors so one could disappear from these awful fears," "I have more of these fears with some teachers than others," "I feel as I stand and talk my legs are moving away from me and I lose my voice," "I feel my legs won't hold me up," "I feel there is nothing between my shoulders and my hips," "I feel a bone is sticking in my throat," "My throat pounds like a Model T Ford," "My voice scares me for it doesn't sound like mine," "My hand sweat and chills run up my back," "After I sit down I feel all worn out," "After I sit down I wonder how many can hear my heart beat," "My ears roar," "I feel my stomach has dropped down to my knees," "My face and neck get hot, and then I feel more scared."

Almost everyone has had at least one of these sensations and it should be some consolation to know that it is a usual human weakness.

WHEN YOUR contract seems to be doomed, it will pay you to stop and see if you can't figure out some arrangement of the hidden cards which might offer you a possible chance. If there is just some one combination which would work, your job is to play as if that exact situation exists. Of course, if it doesn't, then you are beaten. But you would be beaten anyway, in that event, and you at least have the satisfaction of having preserved what slight chance for you still existed, instead of having given up without a try.

Emil Ahlert, rated by many as Pittsburgh's outstanding player, had a neat assignment to carry out on this duplicate deal, on which he was the only successful grand slammer. When West opened the heart 3 and he saw the dummy, it was clear that he had no simple play to avoid a spade loser, so he figured out a complex one, a nice squeeze which could work only if the opponent guarding the second diamond also had five spades. This could be either Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

West with the diamond K-J, and five spades, or East with the same holding, as he built up the play. To do it, he had to avoid the mistake of those declarers who, after taking out the few hostile clubs, immediately played out their three hearts. He saved one, so the squeezing lead could come from his own hand, which was vitally necessary.

He won the heart 3 with his K. Took two high clubs, led the diamond Q, covered by East, and overtook with the A, then took four more clubs, discarding the diamond 5 and spade 3. Came next the heart Q and then the heart 7 to the A—the squeeze card. East had to hold three spades to protect the third one in dummy, so he was obliged to discard the diamond J, in the hope that his partner had the 10. When this did not avail, Mr. Ahlert took in the diamond 10 on the eleventh trick and finished with two spades. It was pretty.

If West leads the spade 4 against South's peculiarly bid 3-No Trumps, East playing life K, how can South assure the success of his contract against any defense?

Cardinals Topple Giants in Ninth

ST. LOUIS, May 13 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals snatched a 3 to 2 victory over the New York Giants today with a run in the ninth inning on an error, a sacrifice and Jim Brown's slashing single past first base.

Each team made seven hits, but two of the Redbirds' safeties were doubles by Johnny Mize with men on base and were good for a run in the first inning and another in the third to build up a two-run lead over Carl Hubbell. The boxscore:

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, May 13—(The Special News Service)—A roundish, beaming little man is up here from the Panama Canal Zone on a still hunt for baseball players, and if he needs any talking point to snare a weavering prospect all he has to say is: "Look at Johnny Grodzicki."

Johnny Grodzicki is one of the good St. Louis Cardinals freshmen pitchers Billy Southworth has too many of, to commit a little grammatical mayhem. On his 1940 record of three wins and three defeats with Rochester he was at home in a twilight league, yet here he is pitching major league baseball, and all because he took a sore arm down to Panama and gave it a sun bath.

The little man's name is Ernest C. Cotton and he chronicles baseball the year around for a newspaper at Cristobal. In the summer he writes about our major league ball, and in the winter about the Canal Zone league, which is his pride and joy. He's up here on vacation, with the added motive of signing up ten good, journeyman ball players and a couple of umpires for his circuit.

Dates Back to 1906

The Canal Zone league dates back to 1906. Right now it has four members—Cristobal, Colon, Balboa and Diabolo—and it plays a twice-a-week, thirty-six-game schedule from the first of the year to April 15. They are trying to boost the schedule to fifty contests so the league will be recognized by the National association.

"I'd say it was a fast-class B league," Cotton says. "Most of the players have steady jobs. In fact, we guarantee any players that we might want a job that pays a minimum of $100 a month."

"That isn't all their pay, though. The clubs are civic enterprises. Communities raise funds for the league and club operation through raffles, beauty contests, fish fries and the like. All the receipts to the games are split among the players."

"Last year the thirty-six games drew a total attendance of 68,000, and the receipts of one club came to $3,775. That's about $200 for each man on the club, and considering a player has a job paying $100 a month or better, that $200 side money for playing twice a week isn't so bad."

The league is semi-subsidized by the government, Cotton explains. The teams are given free transportation on the railroad, and if a player misses a train he can hire a special railway motor car for $25, instead of the customary $60.

Play Twice a Week

The games are played on Sundays and Thursdays, and each club has a first-class park. In fact, Cotton says the Phillies have indicated they are considering the Canal Zone for their 1942 training. They'll

Committees Named For Net Tourney

Committees to handle arrangements for the Allegheny Mountains tennis tournament, to be held on local courts from Wednesday, August 20 to Sunday, August 24, inclusive, have been appointed and will start work on preliminary plans for the 1941 event.

This tourney annually draws leading men and women net stars of Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Washington and smaller cities in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland. It has again been sanctioned by the United States Lawn Tennis Association. The committees follow:

Advisory—Fred T. Small, L. E. Van Sant, Joseph Garlitz, Mrs. Gordon L. Bowie and Mrs. Robert King. General chairman and treasurer—Mrs. C. Cotton. Co-chairman, Mrs. King.

Publicity—Miss Margaret Coulahan and Van Sant. Financial—Lorraine Eisenberg, Hugo Keller, George McA. Young and "Chick" McAlpine.

Social—Mrs. Arden Lowndes, Mrs. J. W. McClure, Mrs. G. William Bibby and Mrs. P. T. Small. Hospitality—Miss Betty Flake, Mrs. Leo Leasure, Miss Louise Wilson and Miss Martha Heizer.

Grounds—Gordon L. Bowie, Joseph Garlitz and J. W. McClure. Referee—John Loud, Robert Bane, Robert King and Ross Palmer. Ball boy—Russell Ponton. Local entries—Mrs. Thomas Mills, Miss Cody Whitman and Miss Amelia Ann Clouse.

Official referee—Van Sant.

wind up in New Zealand yet. But maybe we should quit kidding the Philis. It takes a good, stout club to hold up seven other clubs so long.

The idea that a ball player might wear himself out by playing the game the year around is disputed by evidence to the contrary. We recall that the Cuban All-Stars who played a series with the Rodgers

this spring had a 53-year-old catcher, and Mike Ryba, the 36-year-old

Red Sox rookie, spent two winters in the Canal Zone league. Ryba, incidentally, was responsible for Grodzicki's present down there.

The Canal Zone, Cotton says, is as baseball-minded as Detroit, and because of Grodzicki is pulling for the Cards. All but one citizen, that is, Cotton is a Dodger rooter. Other wise he seems quite normal.

Maryland-Owned Horses Clean Up At Charles Town

CHARLESTOWN, W. Va., May 13 (AP)—Maryland-owned and trained thoroughbreds cleaned up today, winning four of the first six races at the Charles Town track.

Mrs. Henry S. Horkheimer's Pomary took the Ransom, six and a half furlong feature, under Sammy Palumbo's clever handling. Pomary led from Barrier to wire, and paid $8 for $2. W. B. Pendlebury's Transday was second, nosing out C. R. Bowman Jr.'s Schley Al in a photo finish.

Undependable, owned and trained by John Bosley, Jr., of Monks, made a runaway of the fifth, also paying backers $8. E. A. Nicodemus' Mowmet easily accounted for the four and a half furlong opener to pay $11.80 with Everett Brining's Marandian scoring in the second, paying $9.60.

Long-shot players collected $19.40 when Mrs. E. I. Cranford's Last Scamp annexed the third race at seven furlongs.

Rigney Conquers Boston's Red Sox

BOSTON, May 13 (AP)—John Duncan Rigney, who is expecting a call momentarily to join Uncle Sam's fighting forces, held the Boston Red Sox sluggers to four scattered hits today as the Chicago White Sox triumphed, 3-2, to vault into second place in the American League standings.

Rigney hooked up with Charlie Wagner in a tight hurling duel at wind-swept Fenway park and it was the latter's generosity which pushed the Chicks into an early two-run lead.

John Duncan accounted for the winning run by doubling and romping home on Bill Knickerbocker's two-base wallop. In the seventh, The box score:

Insurance Clinics To Be State-wide After October 1

Idea Started by Cumberland Life Underwriters Grows in Maryland

John B. Gontum, insurance commissioner for the State of Maryland, yesterday notified W. Ambrose Ryland, president of the Cumberland Life Underwriters Association, that insurance clinics, which have been held here semi-monthly, will be suspended until October 1.

Gontum explained that the new budget will go into effect at that time and the state insurance department will have an additional appropriation to take care of the expenses of the advisory service.

The state commissioner said that as a result of the experience in Cumberland his department will be able to inaugurate a state-wide system of insurance clinics. He added that he felt that in pioneering this service, insurance men and the state department have been able to perform a truly constructive service for the whole field of insurance.

"We have, indeed, been gratified with the work in Cumberland," said Gontum, and our success is largely due to the splendid co-operation we received from the life insurance men of Cumberland and also to the generous and intelligent help which has been extended by the papers of Cumberland."

In conclusion Gontum added that "we are under a real debt of gratitude to Governor O'Connor for his sympathetic and helpful attitude and for his interest in the insurance business of Maryland."

Suspended Sentence Is Given Local Man

Bert Lepley, this city, received a three months suspended sentence yesterday in trial magistrates court on a charge of assaulting his wife, Pleasant Lepley.

Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr. suspended sentence on condition Lepley refrain from liquor and give his wife sufficient money to maintain his home.

Some conclusions were made available to the press on the basis of an interview with Ivone Kirkpatrick, former counselor of the British embassy in Berlin, had with Hess in Scotland.

While in Berlin, was a close acquaintance of the deputy führer.

This material made these points:

Hess is sane and healthy, except for a leg injury.

He is being treated as a prisoner-of-war at a secret place of confinement. No reporters may see him.

He brought no special message to Britain, no "peace plan."

If his flight was trick, "it was a very, very strange one."

He flew to Britain in uniform, and, as far as is known, alone, a distance of about 800 miles.

Apparently he bailed out when he ran out of gasoline. Officially presumed he flew to Scotland because there would be less air activity there.

Contract Dispute Is Heard by Jury

Breach of Agreement Charged by Sub-Contractor on Beall High

A circuit court jury is scheduled to debate today a contract dispute growing out of construction of the new Beall high school at Prostrburg. J. Thomas Flynn, who was structural steel sub-contractor on the project, is seeking nearly $1,000 damages from Joseph J. Bendik, the general contractor, for alleged breach of contract.

Under the temporary agreement, the Southerners consented to a $1-a-day increase to $5.50, with the differential controversy to be adjusted later.

The Northern operators met a union demand for a $7 a day wage scale, a $1 a day increase over the previous two years, but the Southern owners held out for continuation of a wage differential of 40 cents a day. The union asked a blanket increase to $7 a day for both Northern and Southern mines, which would have boosted the Southern scale $1.40 a day from the previous $5.60 level.

The men appeared seeking relief for themselves and their families but when it was pointed out by Miss Elsie Hepp, executive secretary of the welfare board, that they had been certified for WPA work, they were told nothing could be done for them under the law, even though they were not actually working.

The men said their families were in dire need, one declaring that his children were unable to go to school because of lack of proper clothing.

With county agencies powerless to aid under these circumstances, Simeon W. Green, president of the board of commissioners, instructed James Stevenson, clerk to ascertain from state WPA headquarters whether projects will be available soon to absorb such men, estimated to number 100.

The issues were not announced, but it was reported that the strikers wanted wage increases of about 20 cents from present rates of 30 cents to $1.20 an hour. The company has no union contract, but Robert Mintz, a field organizer for the CIO Electrical Radio and Machine Workers Union, said that the union was ready to negotiate immediately for a collective bargaining agreement.

Mintz said that seventy-five percent of the more than 5,000 employees had joined the union and had authorized it to negotiate.

A company official said he had not seen the union's offer, but that the management would be willing to confer Wednesday with representatives of the State Labor department, the Federal Office of Production management and the workers' committee. He did not mention the union.

Two hundred carpenters went on strike at the government's new $30,000,000 shell loading plant at Ravenna Ohio, demanding 25-cent-an-hour increases from the present hourly scale of $1.12.

The Hunkins-Conkey Construction Company said 2,000 carpenters were employed on the job.

The dispute ended later and the company announced a new rate of $1.37, an hour would be paid carpenters effective today, Capt. Earl D. Payne, Army public relations officer, attributed the eight-hour walkout to "a misunderstanding" and asserted "officially, no strike was called."

Strive to Avert G. M. C. Strike

In Washington, the Defense Mediation Board began its tenth day of negotiations to prevent a strike in sixty General Motors plants.

When the discussions were resumed after a weekend recess, members of the Defense Board withdrew temporarily and left representatives of the company and the CIO United Auto Workers to talk things over among themselves. The union has set its strike deadline at 7 a. m. Thursday unless an agreement is reached prior to that time.

A strike of CIO Auto Workers, scheduled for yesterday against the Hudson Motor Company in Detroit, was averted temporarily when the union agreed to give company directors time to consider its demands. The union is asking a 15-cent-an-hour increase. The present wage scale was not announced.

From San Francisco, where shipyard strikes are holding up $500,000,000 of naval construction, an appeal was telegraphed to President Roosevelt asking immediate action to re-open the eleven yards affected. The telegram, sent by Walter A. Haas, of the city's chamber of commerce, said:

"The very security of the nation demands that regardless of the issues all men return to work immediately pending negotiations and settlement of differences."

"The shipyard strikers—AFL and CIO machinists—are asking $1.15 an hour and continuation of double time for overtime. They are now receiving $1 an hour. They are now has been called an 'outlaw strike' by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor."

At Chicago, approximately 2,300 AFL molders and other foundry workers struck against a score of iron and brass foundries. They asked wage boosts of 12½ cents an hour to $1.17½.

ago after being idle during a month of negotiations.

A two-year contract expired April 1, and the mines were re-opened with the understanding that work would go on pending negotiations for a new contract.

Alice Faye Answers British Tar's Plea

During the filming of "The Great American Broadcast," Alice Faye passed up on lunch hour. She had to write a letter, and a very special sort of letter it was.

The actress, who is co-starred with John Payne, Jack Oakie and Cesar Romero in this production, now at the Strand theater, had received a letter from one of her most ardent fans, W. G. Friel, a sailor aboard a British destroyer, one of the ships recently turned over to England by the United States.

His former ship had gone down, and although he lost most of his personal possessions, the one loss he really lamented was a prized autographed picture of Miss Faye.

"Please send me another," he wrote, "so that I can get it framed and hang it up in a prominent place aboard this ship."

Alice sent, not one, but a half-dozen photographs of herself, all autographed, when she took time out for lunch during "The Great American Broadcast."

The featured cast of this picture is headed by Mary Beth Hughes, The Nicholas Brothers, The Wier Brothers and The Four Inkspots are others who lend their talents.

Clarence Stroud in Person at Maryland

It is hard to believe that the conveyor of superlatives, that master of Webster's best-seller, Clarence Stroud was once a swash-buckling, hard riding buckaroo. This true though and the Maryland the-

Born in Texas and raised on his father's ranch, Clarence learned to ride with the best of the cowpunchers. It was while riding the range that he learned to use those fourteen Karat words and he explains, "My evenings of diversion were spent with the only book I

From the ranch both Clarence and brother, Claude, went to college at Texas A. & A. It was while attending school that they became interested in dramatics and went on to write and appear as a team at college functions. Later moving into night clubs as headline entertainers they were discovered by Rudy Vallee. After several appearances on his show, they became the famous Stroud twins. At the present time they have split up to allow Claude Stroud to follow his desire of writing which he is now doing in Hollywood.

Also appearing in the show are Shaw and Lee, favorites of stage and screen; Rolfe Roland in the "How To Undress with Finesse," and twenty-five madcap-manics.

The screen presentation is "Under

Brenda Marshall In Liberty Film

There was the dull bark of a pistol shot. A beautiful woman ran down the hallway calling for help. People came running noisily from many rooms. That was the end of a scene for "Singapore Woman," now showing at the Liberty theater.

Said Brenda, "Somehow I am the center of storms, cafe brawls, loud shouting and pistol shots all the time."

Brenda was referring to her role, which marks the pretty girl's elevation to stardom.

It is the story of a young woman who brings bad luck to everyone

Love, adventure and action are on the entertainment bill of fare at the Liberty. "Knockout!" is the story of a prize-fighter who had to choose between a boxing ring and a wedding ring, but remained undecided until he was double-crossed.

The role of the fighter is played by Arthur Kennedy, who won unanimous praise as Cagney's brother in "City For Conquest." His ladyfair is played by charming Olympe Bradna who is making her first screen appearance for Warners.

Conrad Epic Scores As Picture Drama

Spurred into life by the magic of Hollywood, "Victory," Paramount's filmization of the great novel by Joseph Conrad is now at the Garden theater.

Starring Fredric March and Betty Field, the picture wrought from the novel, which millions have read and enjoyed for over a generation, must be listed in the front rank of major screen achievements. It is definitely a triumph for its splendid cast, its producer, its director and everyone connected with the making of this thrillingly beautiful story of exciting adventure and romance.

Not only Conrad fans, but everyone will find grand entertainment in this screen version of the novel. Blasting the "Escort Bureau" racket wide open, Columbia Pictures has turned the spotlight on the city's most vicious blackmail gang—the mobsters who prey on pretty "escorts" and their unsuspecting boy friends in "Glamour for Sale," which is now at the Garden.

Bob Feller Stops Yankees 2-1 in Ten Innings

Lou Boudreau's Home Run Gives Indians Victory

"Rapid Robert" Allows Six Hits, Fans Nine and Walks Pair

NEW YORK, May 13 (AP)—Lou Boudreau sliced a home run into the right field stands of Yankee stadium in the tenth inning today to hand Bob Feller and the Cleveland Indians a 2 to 1 victory over the New York Yankees.

It was a well earned triumph for Feller, his sixth of the season against two defeats, but he might have had it easier except for a mental lapse by the Indians' infield in the sixth inning.

Scouter Rizzuto led off the sixth with a stinking double into left center. Red Rolfe bunted toward first and Feller fielded cleanly. But when he turned to throw no one was on the bag an instant, then got off to make room for First baseman Hal Trosky. In the confusion Feller threw and nobody caught the ball. Rizzuto scored and Rolfe went to second.

The play was scored as a hit for Rolfe and an error for Feller, although he was blameless.

In other days Feller might have "blown up," but he struck out the next batter and kept the Yankees smothered until his teammates eventually won out. He allowed just six hits, struck out nine and walked two. The box score:

Novikoff on Way

Says Coach Grimm

Early Letdown Natural after Terrific Pre-Season Buildup

CHICAGO, May 13 (AP)—As Coach Charley Grimm of the Chicago Cubs sees it, Lou Novikoff's early season letdown was perfectly natural after that terrific pre-season buildup—but Grimm is willing to wait a few more days before he has found himself at last.

True, the batting averages won't prove Novikoff a great hitter as yet, for up to today he had hit only 222 through eighteen games. But Grimm believes the 25-year-old outfielder finally has begun to loosen up after weeks of tension.

"There's absolutely no question in my mind that he can and will hit," said Grimm. "Most power hitters are slow starters and when the season opened he was trying so hard to make good that his stride at the plate was too long and he was pressing on every pitch. Recently he has been looking better every day."

"He's not a finished hitter, but he knows possibilities of becoming one," said Grimm. "Most power hitters are slow starters and when the season opened he was trying so hard to make good that his stride at the plate was too long and he was pressing on every pitch. Recently he has been looking better every day."

One of the most highly publicized rookies of recent seasons, Novikoff came to the Cubs with a .363 batting average in the Pacific Coast League and remains of magazine copy which indicated that if he failed to hit 500 first season he should be considered a distinct flop.

Strangely enough, Chicago fans were unusually sympathetic when he got away to a bad start. Grimm believes the turning point was reached Sunday and Monday when Lou had five hits against Cincinnati.

Attendance—25,150.

U. S. Government Sends Food Here For Needy Miners

12,000 Pounds of Surplus Commodities Slated To Arrive Today

A shipment of 12,000 pounds of foodstuffs furnished by the federal government is expected to arrive here today for distribution to needy Allegheny county miners, it was announced yesterday by Simon W. Green, president of the board of county commissioners.

The food, consisting of surplus commodities held by the federal government, is being sent by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Green said, after being requested by himself, Commissioner James Holmes, A. Charles Stewart, Frostburg businessman and Republican candidate for the House of Representatives; John T. Jones, president of District 16 of the United Mine Workers; and William J. Morgan, UMW official here.

Despite the fact that the Georges Creek and Upper Potomac Coal Association and the United Mine Workers reached a temporary agreement last week to reopen the mines, which had been closed since April 1 because of failure to reach a wage contract, Green said that several small operations in the county have not yet reopened and that all employees of the larger mines are not yet back at work.

Even those who are working will not be paid until May 24 and then will get only a week's pay, he said. Because of these factors, he added, miners and their families are in want.

Robert L. Stallings, president of the coal operators association, said he had made no survey of the situation but that it was his understanding that most of the miners were back at work. He said that all the larger mines were working, but added that it was possible some of the smaller operations might not have resumed work yet.

Green said he would appoint a committee today to supervise distribution of the commodities.

Event Scheduled May 27 at Allegany; Miss Hunter To Sing

Ten instrumental and two vocal numbers will comprise the program of the Cumberland Alumni Orchestra, which will present its third and final concert of the season Tuesday, May 27, at 8:15 p. m. in the Allegheny high school auditorium. It was announced yesterday by Milton A. Hartz, director.

The program will consist of light classical music and the featured vocalist will be Miss Elizabeth Hunter, soprano, who will sing "Song without Words," by Mendelssohn, and "Serenade," by Schubert. The orchestra will play the accompaniment.

Tickets Ready Soon

Tickets for the concert will be placed on sale within the next week at the Music School, Inc., South Liberty street, or may be obtained from members of the orchestra.

The orchestra, sponsored by the Cumberland Rotary Club, scored in two previous concerts this season and the May 27 program, will bring to a conclusion its third successful year.

It was originally intended to present the concert on May 28 but the date was set ahead one day on account of its conflicting with the Baltimore and Ohio day celebration.

The orchestra program will comprise the following numbers:

- "Irish Tune from County Derry," by Grainger.
- "First Movement from Symphony No. 13," (Adagio) by Haydn.
- "Grand March from Aida," by Verdi.

Announcement yesterday that Governor Herbert R. O'Connor accepted an invitation and that the senior band and junior drum corps of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13 will participate in the parade marking Baltimore and Ohio Employees' Cumberland Day, Wednesday, May 28, added much to the interest in the second annual event.

The governor notified J. Rex Miller, co-chairman of the men's committee on arrangements, by telegram that he will arrive early in the afternoon and will attend the banquet in the evening at the state armory.

Thomas F. Conlon, marshal yesterday announced that the parade will form in the old baseball park adjoining the Republic Steel Company plant at 3 p. m. and will start moving up Virginia avenue an hour later.

Low Interest Rate on City Bonds Seen as Both Good and Bad Sign

The record low rate of interest at which the city of Cumberland sold a $300,000 bond issue last week reflects favorably on the city's credit and the stability of the community, but it also underlines the dangers of a "punitive theory of taxation," John J. Robinson declared last night in the weekly broadcast of the chamber of commerce.

Robinson, treasurer of the Liberty Trust Company, said the low rate on bonds for construction of the airport and Memorial hospital addition was "a tribute to our city management and our stability" because "investors seeking securities of this type do not buy bonds in cities which are subject to wide fluctuation in income or dependent upon a temporary industrial expansion."

Money Cheap Aside from this favorable side of the picture from Cumberland's standpoint, the low rate also "indicates clearly and forcefully how cheap money is today in this country," the speaker went on. "It indicates how little money will earn and how much more is needed to provide even a modest income for those who through their own frugality attempt to set aside some of their earnings to take care of unexpected personal reverses.

"It indicates that there is a tremendous reservoir of uninvested funds competing for securities which offer safety. Today, safety in the investment field is of more interest than income, which means that our American people who for years have been willing to invest their savings in productive enterprise, even though a certain amount of risk was involved, no longer feel that the possibility of a higher return is commensurate with the risk involved."

Referring specifically to the Celanese and the Kelly-Springfield plants and the railroads, Robinson said it was "through this so-called enterprise money, which was selling, but the frost was not nearly as serious as it would have been a month ago."

Early garden vegetables, such as tomatoes and string beans, suffered considerably, McHenry went on, but this he said was not serious because new plants can be set out.

Alfalfa was somewhat affected, and its growth will probably be checked

Truck Driver Is Killed at Savage River Dam Project

Suffers Crushed Chest When Water Tank Truck Overturns

A 24-year-old Franklin man early yesterday morning was the third worker killed on the Savage river dam project since the huge construction job was started in 1939. Raymond Riggelman, single, this county, was crushed to death between 1 and 2 o'clock when the heavy water tank truck he was driving swerved from the road and overturned, pinning him under the running board. He apparently attempted to leap from the truck when it started to upset.

Dr. Robert Williams, acting deputy medical examiner, said death resulted from a crushed chest. Garrett county authorities said Riggelman had filled the tank shortly after 1 a. m., and was to sprinkle the dirt roads on the dam site. He was found by a group of other workers engaged in fueling the drag line and it was necessary to raise the capsized truck before the body could be extricated.

Officers said the accident occurred on a straight stretch of the road, in bright moonlight, and they were at loss to understand what caused the truck to leave the road and upset. The lights on the machine were in good order.

Sheriff J. William Owens, of Garrett county, and Corp. Thomas A. Currie, of the state police, assisted in the investigation after being notified by Deputy Curtis Wilson, who is stationed at the dam.

Surviving the victim are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Riggelman, of Franklin, four brothers, Clarence Riggelman, of Keyser, W. Va., and Lewis, Elwood and Melvin Riggelman, of Franklin, and seven sisters, Mrs. Jonas Jenner and Mrs. McClelland Riggelman, both of Westernport; Mrs. James Potts, Mrs. Raymond Sterling, Misses Hilda, Thelma and Ruby Riggelman, all of Franklin.

Crops Hit by Frost, but Damage Not Serious, County Agent Says

Damage to crops as a result of yesterday morning's sub-freezing temperature in this area was not serious, according to County Agent Ralph F. McHenry.

Grapes were hard hit in spots, he said, but the frost was not nearly as serious as it would have been a month ago.

Early garden vegetables, such as tomatoes and string beans, suffered considerably, McHenry went on, but this he said was not serious because new plants can be set out.

Alfalfa was somewhat affected, and its growth will probably be checked and the hay crop consequently decreased, he said, adding, however, that a good rain would help overcome this retardation to a great extent.

The lowest reading here early yesterday was thirty-one degrees, but the mercury gradually climbed to the sixties during the afternoon. Lower temperatures were reported in outlying sections.

Stewart Confers With GOP Group At Frederick

Also Speaks at Takoma Park and Chevy Chase; Goes to Garrett Today

A. Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, Republican candidate for the House of Representatives in the Sixth Maryland district, in the special election Tuesday, May 27, conferred with G. O. P. leaders of Frederick county last evening in Frederick, climaxing a strenuous day of campaigning in Montgomery county.

Starting out early yesterday morning, the Republican nominee opened his daily schedule in Silver Springs, where he made personal contacts with merchants in a store-to-store canvass. At noon he spoke at the Lions club meeting in Takoma park and from 2 to 4 p. m. he was a guest at the lawn party given at the estate of Galen L. Taft, former leader of the Republican party in Maryland, in Chevy Chase. Stewart and Mrs. Robert Taft, wife of United States Senator Taft, of Ohio, were the principal speakers at the party.

From 4 to 6 p. m., yesterday Stewart visited Bethesda where he made a number of personal contacts with merchants and business men.

Touring Washington county on Monday, Stewart met hundreds of voters during the day in Sharpsburg, Brownsville, Keedysville, Downsville, Sandy Hook, Boonsboro and in farming communities in the lower end of the county.

Today at 12:30 the G. O. P. standard bearer will have lunch with the Garrett County Republican State Central Committee in Grantsville after which he will tour certain sections of the county until evening when he will be among the guests at the charter night program of the Oakland Junior Association of Commerce at the Manhattan hotel.

The Rev. William von Spreckelsen, pastor, announced yesterday that the drive was a success due to the efforts of those donating and the interest shown by the Young People's League.

Those who aided in collecting the funds were Leon Perdue, Dorothy Schiller, Paul Helker, Milton Holiz, Virginia Showman, Lula Norris, Cleo and Harold Knippenburg, William George, Ruth Atney, Maude McKinsey and Kathleen Brant.

Raymond Kolb Describes Typical London Air Raid for Rotarians

Cumberland Rotarians were taken through a typical London air raid yesterday at their weekly luncheon at the Fort Cumberland hotel.

The experience, while imaginary, was vividly presented by Raymond Kolb, a native Cumberlander, who has spent the last fourteen years in the American embassy at London, whence he arrived on leave of absence last Friday on a clipper plane from Lisbon.

Kolb was introduced by Arnett M. Widener, a life-long friend and former schoolmate, who related some amusing experiences of their school-day associations as well as giving a sketch of his interesting career.

Describes Typical Raid Kolb's description of a typical raid by Nazi bombers and fighter planes over the British capital began with the screaming of the raid sirens and ended with the all-clear signals.

The speaker told of the agony experienced when the big planes droned out of sight overhead, the machine guns plopped the anti-aircraft guns roared, and the flares, incendiary bombs and high explosives swished and banged.

But, while great damage had been done in Britain, Kolb said, it has not generally been so inclusive of life and limb as many have perhaps imagined. This has been due to the numerous precautions that have been taken. Shelters are provided everywhere, the speaker said. Each household is provided with one, and large ones have been constructed in the congested centers, as well as on all commons and other vacant property. These are provided with air conditioning systems, are strongly made with blast walls at the doors and buried under tons of earth.

Organizations against air raiding and fires from incendiary sticks and chandeliers has been thoroughgoing, Kolb said. This has developed with experience, and the ARP (Air Raid Protection), the auxiliary fire service and the special police are now formed into an organization known as the Civil Defense. Men called into service have their choice of becoming regular soldiers or members of the Civil Defense, and most of those lately called are going into the latter.

Police last night reported no developments in their search for a burglar who entered the home of Dorrie O. Owen, 307 Broadway, early Sunday morning, and fled with his trousers which contained sixty-five cents.

His wife told officers that the man entered the apartment at 4 a. m., and that he was in the bedroom when she awoke and screamed. The intruder fled, she added, but he grabbed the trousers from a chair as he ran.
